A Prohibition Incident Rickard Knew Men Signing the Pledge Trimming Elijah

—By Arthur Brisbane—

Copyright, 1929, by Star Co.

A WOMAN in Newark, 37 years old, tells the police she has killed Julius Brennen, 56 years old. He brought whiskey and cocaine to her house. She took both and killed him. That is all she remembers. Interesting incident for those that consider prohibition a success.

"Tex" Rickard is dead, and distinguished citizens speak in praise of him.

He once ran gambling houses on the West, but found more nearly "a sure thing" when he organized on a paying basis, incorporated and listed on the stock exchange, the intense desire of certain prosperous gentlemen to see SOMEBODY ELSE knocked down, and knocked out.

"Tex" Rickard understood human nature. He knew, through and through, the fighters that he put in the ring, and the crowds that he drew to see them.

And he didn't think much of either.

If you don't believe in the Kellogg pact, it will comfort you to know that, thanks to Senator Reed of Missouri, there will be plain talk in the Senate before the pact goes through.

The pact is a sort of solemn promise by Uncle Sam never to attack anybody, wantonly.

Whom has he EVER attacked wantonly?

A drunkard needs to sign a pledge, a temperance man does not.

Why should Uncle Sam sign a peace pledge merely because European nations insist on fighting each other?

The Question Mark was landed yesterday afternoon after more than 150 hours of continuous flight.

All non-stop flying records are broken. That machines, in flight, can take fuel and supplies from smaller, swifter planes, had been abundantly proved.

The interesting question now is, "How long can American airplane engines continue working?"

The Question Mark might have flown from Los Angeles to China and back again, without landing, so far as endurance is concerned.

F. Trubee Davison, assistant secretary of war in charge of aviation, wired from Washington to the fliers above Los Angeles, "Let's trim Elijah."

Elijah, you remember, went to heaven in a chariot of fire. Exactly where heaven is, or how long it took Elijah to go there, is not known.

But so far as this earth is concerned, Elijah has been "trimmed" by the Question Mark. Young Mr. Davison is the right man for his job. He flies constantly, although badly smashed up at the start of his flying in war time.

Miami's new municipal airport, Chapman Field, was opened yesterday, with 100 airplanes roaring overhead.

"Stunt" exhibitions, races, bomb dropping, with cash prizes for precision, and other features, reminded the crowd that Miami is up with the times and a little ahead.

Those who think a couple of tornadoes, plus a crowd of real estate sharks from the outside, can permanently injure a State like Florida, don't know much about Florida, or about Americans generally.

Wall Street did not welcome Herbert Hoover's return as cheerfully as it might have done. Stocks went off, although money for speculation cost "only" 7 per cent.

Wall Street, and Mr. Hoover knows it well, was none too enthusiastic about his election. Perhaps the Street thinks Mr. Hoover will be "an Independent" President. The Street does not like that kind.

Chinese authorities in Canton have forbidden the "Ben Hur" picture, calling it "Christian propaganda decoying the people to superstition."

To hear Christianity called "superstition" will surprise many of us.

In any case "Ben Hur" cannot be called Christian propaganda. It is, if anything, "Jewish propaganda," since the hero is a fine young Jew, his sister and mother, admirable characters, both Jewesses.

Henry Ford is said to have sent an offer to build 155 miles of first-class highroad to suit the Egyptian government, if that government would remove the duty from Ford cars. Egypt might accept. No cars are manufactured in Egypt, no competition with home industry.

Owners of Egyptian camels and donkeys that carry tourists to the Pyramids would not like it.

MORE PROSPERITY IS SEEN BY COOLIDGE

Washington, Jan. 8 (INS)—Prospects for continued general business prosperity are good, in the opinion of President Coolidge.

He based his optimism on a report submitted to the cabinet today by Secretary of Commerce Whiting.

Whiting reported the business conditions for the last six months of 1928 were better than for the first six months of the year and were close to the high standard set in 1927.

The President also took occasion to admonish Congress again to hold the purse strings tight on new appropriations until the exact financial condition of the Treasury can be determined with the receipt of the March tax returns.

JUSTICE WAIT HEARS AUTO RATE ARGUMENT

Justice Wait in Supreme Court today took under consideration demurrers of Asst. Atty-Gen. Roger Clapp to proceedings brought to modify or annul the present compulsory automobile insurance rates promulgated by Acting Insurance Commissioner Arthur E. Linnell.

Asst. Atty-Gen. Clapp opposed petitions brought by Representative Elmer E. Spear of Everett and the Boston Association of Casualty Insurance General Agents. He also objected to the allowance of the petition of Eugene M. Curran for a review of Linnell's action on the ground the petition was multifarious.

If Justice Wait sustains the demurrers, an order probably will be made dismissing the bills in equity and petitions for review now pending, but if the demurrers are overruled a master would be appointed to find the facts which would be necessary for consideration by the full bench to which the cases would go.

Rome, January 8.

IT was a moment of great excitement. We guessed it was the Swedes coming to take us. Dragging myself on the ice, I also went out of the tent, followed by Cecioni. Now the rhythm of the motors reached us clearly, cheering us like sweet music.

I looked around in search of the aeroplanes, but the masses of ice surrounding our encampment prevented me from seeing them. Viglieri, Biagi and Behounek were standing, scrutinizing the horizon.

"Here they are!"

Two aeroplanes came toward us, the rhythm of the motors becoming more sonorous I gave the order:

"Make smoke."

The smoke rose, dense and black. The two aeroplanes circ-

BRUINS GET HARVARD EX-STAR

By BILL GRIMES

George Owen, former Harvard football, baseball and hockey star, and rated as the greatest college ice product since the days of the immortal "Hobey" Baker, has signed to play with the Boston Bruins.

He will make his first appearance as a Bruinian tonight, when he will play on defense with Eddie Shore against the Toronto Maple Leafs in the Garden.

The acquisition of Owen, who was signed up by Weston Adams, another former Crimson hockey player and son of Charles F. Adams, owner of the Bruins, is the most surprising and popular move the local pro sextet ever made.

It is surprising because Owen announced after completing his course at Harvard that he would never play pro hockey, and repeatedly turned down most attractive offers from nearly every club in the league.

It is popular because Owen has long been considered the greatest all-around hockey player ever developed in these parts, and the fans have been wanting to see him play with

"Backs" Adams

ERNEST J. GOULSTON

Who testified today in Sunday sports inquiry as to "integrity" of C. F. Adams of Braves and relations with "Dan Carroll."

ASSERTS HE OBJECTED TO CHARGES AGAINST CARROLL AND COUNCIL

Ernest J. Goulston, called today as a witness at the Sunday sports hearing, said Charles F. Adams of the Braves told him of alleged solicitation of a bribe by City Councillor Lynch. Goulston also told of a conversation with "Dan" Carroll, fight manager, regarding Carroll's connection with Lynch.

City Council records relating to the "tabling" of the Sunday sports measure, which led to bribery charges by the Boston Braves, were demanded and produced today at resumption of the Finance Commission's investigation of the accusations made against 13 councillors.

A capacity crowd filled the floor seats and balcony in Lorimer Hall of Tremont Temple where today's hearing took place, having been transferred from the political atmosphere of the State House to this auditorium, where quotations from Scripture adorn the walls.

A detachment of police from Milk street division was on hand to preserve order.

City Clerk and Acting Mayor Wilfred Doyle, who produced the council records, revealed that as yet the council is without official notice of the acceptance of the Sunday sports law by the voters of Massachusetts.

This was brought out in cross examination by Attorney Joseph P. Walsh, who represents City Councillor William G. Lynch

SAYS 'WITCH SLAYER' SET FIRE TO VICTIM

By JAMES L. KILGALLEN, International News Correspondent.

Courthouse, York, Pa., Jan. 8—"We'll get a lock of the old man's hair. That will break his bad luck spell."

So said John Blymyer, admitted "pow-wow" doctor, as he and two others started for the home of Nelson D. Rohmeyer, 69-year-old farmer retiree, the night of November 27 last, when Rohmeyer was beaten and burned to death, Clayton G. Hess, 23-year-old lumber company foreman, testified today.

Hess is a star witness in the trial of Blymyer for first-degree murder.

Blymyer later admitted he "got the witch," Hess said. Two others accompanied Blymyer to the "murder farm." They were Wilbert Hess, 19-year-old brother of the witness, and John Curry, 14.

"Blymyer came to our place and talked about the spell that Rohmeyer had cast over my family. He asked me to drive out to the woods near Rohmeyer's place. He said he wanted to get some of Rohmeyer's

ELEVEN RESCUED FROM PERIL IN THREE FIRES

Eleven persons, including nine children, were rescued, many were driven into the biting cold of the open air, and damage estimated at $15,000 was caused by fires in Frenchmont, Winthrop and Cambridge today, while police were investigating an alleged incendiary case that caused $30,000 damage in an occupied house at 143 Walnut ave., Roxbury.

The Beachmont fire occurred in an unoccupied dwelling at 36 Crest ave., occupied by 20 persons, the youngest a 6-months-old girl. Starting from an overheated furnace, the fire filled the house with smoke, arousing both families, and an alarm was sounded by a passerby.

Firemen rescued some of the seven children of Mr. and Mrs. Jerry De Gruttola on the second floor, and the others were escorted to safety by the father and mother.

In the meantime other firemen went to the third floor and carried out the 10-months-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Sturiale.

BODY OF TEX ESCORTED TO MADISON SQ. GARDEN

New York, Jan. 8—Like a bronze jewel box in the center of an empty amphitheater, the $15,000 casket containing the remains of Tex Rickard, today reposed simply in the new Madison Square Garden, his dream arena.

Today it was lonesome—only a cluster of high-hatted officials, a dozen policemen, an honor guard and the thousands of empty chairs soaring down from concrete tiers on this latest spectacle.

It has been intended to keep the public out until tomorrow, but after a conference between Dempsey and the Garden officials, it was decided to open the doors at 6 p. m.

Again tomorrow Tex will have a showman's funeral worthy of his name. The doors of the mighty sports monument he built will be flung ajar and the public permitted to see the master promoter, at home for the last time.

Rickard, who liked crowds, would have been disappointed today. Perhaps it was the piercing cold which whistled about the stately bearer, perhaps it was the ultra-efficiency of the New York police in dispersing groups—but the route of the funeral procession from the Pennsylvania station to the Garden drew only meagre throngs.

BASEBALL HEARING OPENS WITH READING OF MAYOR'S LETTER of South Boston, alleged by Judge Emil Fuchs, Braves' president, to have solicited a $65,000 bribe for himself and 12 others.

Attorney Walsh also brought out from Clerk Doyle that the tabling of the measure was in accord with customary procedure under existing circumstances. The Braves management had charged the measure was delayed in this way for an ulterior motive.

The cause of the accused councillors scored another point, prior to Doyle's appearance on the witness stand, when Chairman Dowling of the Finance Commission revealed he had asked Mayor Nichols to tell what he meant when he said the councillors "want a Christmas tree," and disclosed that the mayor's reply was that he had "no such information."

Mayor's 'Christmas Tree' Disclaimer Causes Roar

Chairman Dowling opened the hearing, saying: "In the Boston Globe of December 22 there appeared an article attributed to the mayor in which he stated 'Poor little Councillors, a little bunch of orphans. What they want is a Christmas tree and they haven't got one.'

"In consequence of this a letter was addressed to Mayor Nichols and he was asked what he meant by that statement, and he was told if he had any information of value to this commission it would be appreciated.

Chairman Dowling then instructed the clerk of the Finance Commission to read a letter sent by Chairman Dowling to the mayor and also the mayor's answer.

The letter was dated Jan. 4, 1929; it repeated the phrase attributed to the mayor, reminded him that public hearings were going on and asked him to explain to the Finance Commission what he meant.

Under date of Jan. 5, 1929, Mayor Nichols acknowledged receipt of the letter and stated: "I am unable to give you any such information. Very sincerely yours, Malcolm E. Nichols."

A roar of laughter arose from the spectators when the mayor's letter was read.

City Clerk Doyle, Acting Mayor, Is First Witness

Wilfred J. Doyle, city clerk, was called as the first witness.

Atty. Walsh: Not as an objection but I merely wish to inform the chair that I had not finished with Mr. Cunningham. There are a few questions which I wish to put to him.

Dowling: I have spoken to Mr. Hoar and he said he would produce Mr. Cunningham when you need him.

Walsh: Now?

Dowling: No at a later time.

Walsh: There are two records which I wish to introduce also.

Dowling: You will be given the opportunity.

City Clerk Doyle was sworn.

Q—Are you the city clerk and acting mayor at present? A—Yes. If you wish to put it that way. (Laughter.)

Q—Was there a meeting of the City Council on December 17? A—Yes.

Q—Have you the records? A—Yes.

Q—Was the matter of Sunday sports brought up at that meeting?

A—Yes. Councillor Ward introduced an order for the acceptance of the Sunday sports bill, and it was tabled on the order of Councillor Dowling, by a vote of 11 to 9.

Q—How did the councillors vote? A—The councillors who voted to table it were: Bush, Downey, Dowd, Donovan, Lynch, Maloney, Sullivan, Ruby and Wilson, making 11. The nays were: Arnold, Fish, Fitzgerald, Gallagher, Green, Keene, Murray, Parkman and Ward, a total of nine.

Motley and Murphy were absent and did not vote.

Q—On December 19 did you receive from the president of the council, Jay Green, directions to call a special meeting on December 21? A—Yes. He notified me between 5:30 and 6 th on the evening of Wednesday, December 19, that he was going to call a special meeting for Friday at noon. I asked him for what purpose, as he would have to state a specific purpose; otherwise we could take up general matters. He said it was to take up the Sunday sports bill.

Asserts Green Insisted Upon Special Meeting

I said 'I thought you decided this afternoon not to call a special meeting.' He said 'I want it called.' I told him it was too late that night to call it but I would call it the next morning which would give time for a legal meeting. I mailed the notices for the special meeting next day, on Thursday.

Q—Was there a special meeting held on the afternoon of Dec. 21? A—No there was no meeting because there was no quorum.

Q—What councillors attended that meeting? A—Arnold, Fish, Fitzgerald, Gallagher, Green, Keene, Murray, Ruby and Ward.

Walsh— There are a few questions I wish to ask City Clerk Doyle. Was there a certified copy of the Sunday sports bill on file with the City Council when the meeting of December 17 was called? A—There was not.

Q—Is it not usual to wait for the certified copy from the Legislature in such matters? A.—Yes.

Q—Isn't the regular proceeding to refer such matters to the executive committee until the certified copy is filed? A.—Yes, that is the procedure. Such matters are referred to the executive committee and are read and acted upon subsequently.

Q—That is the usual procedure? A—Yes.

Q—Then as a matter of fact a certified copy of the Sunday sports bill had not even been filed with the City Council on December 17? A—It had not.

Q—And the matter of tabling such measures as that is usual [illegible] by the City Council? A—Yes. They refer it to the executive committee. I'd like to explain.

Walsh—Go ahead. A.—Councillor Ward introduced the order before the council at that meeting. Councillor Dowling took advantage of the next parliamentary step by offering an order that it be tabled in order to delay and cut off unnecessary debate.

I sent to the Secretary of State for a copy of the Sunday sports bill and for a statement, but thus far we have received neither. Therefore, so far as the City Council is concerned, we have no knowledge officially that the people ever adopted the measure.

Q.—Was there any undue haste on the part of the City Council to accept that order? A.—I couldn't say that there was any undue haste.

Q.—What did Councillor Parkman do in connection with that order? A—The records show that Councillor Ruby arose to a point of personal privilege. He said he wanted to make a statement.

When he started to make a speech Councillor Parkman objected and stopped Ruby. Councillor Parkman wished to cut off debate. I knew it was the intention of a majority of the councillors to defer debate until the matter had been formally presented.

Goulston Testifies to the Integrity of Adams

Ernest J. Goulston followed Clerk Doyle on the stand. Attorney Edward J. Ziegler stepped forward when Goulston was called and announced he represented the witness. In answer to questions put by Chairman Dowling, Goulston said he lives at the Copley Square Hotel, and that he was president and treasurer of the Goulston Company at 18 Tremont st., Boston. He said he knew Charles F. Adams for a period of two years.

Q—Mr. Goulston, are you connected in any way in business with Mr. Adams? A—No. He called upon us for advertising plans at times.

Q—Are you connected with any company of which he is owner or director? A—No.

Q—How did you first meet him, was in in a business or social way? A—I first met him socially. My first attempt to do business with him was in regard to the Sunday Baseball bill. And also in connection with some advertising plans.

Q—Was the plan carried through, Mr. Goulston? A—No sir.

Q—Now in business with Mr. Adams have you always found him a man of honesty and integrity? A—Yes.

Q—Did you ever discover him telling an untruth? A—Not knowingly.

Q—And you have the utmost respect for him? A—As a business man.

Q—And as an individual, too? A—I should say so.

Q—Now, in connection with the Sunday bill did you have occasion to see Daniel Carroll? A.—Yes.

Q—How long have you known him? A—Ten years.

Q—Some time in the last two months did you talk to Dan Carroll with regard to his connection with Councillor Lynch? A.—Yes.

Q—Mr. Goulston, will you tell us what occurred. Tell us the story. A—Mr. Chairman, I think it important to tell the conversation I had with Mr. Adams on the telephone before going ahead with the talk with Mr. Carroll.

Dowling nodded aproval and the witness continued:

"I had occasion on Tuesday or Wednesday before Christmas to call on Mr. Adams in regard to some editorial matter that was to go in the Arthur E. Dorr Company's advertising matter. In the course of our conversation I said: 'Now, Charlie, I suppose you are going to have a good year with Sunday baseball.' He said he didn't know and that he was having a lot of trouble. "He told me the story of Lynch going to Judge Fuchs and about a request for $5000 for 13 men in the Council. I said: 'Charlie, that sounds incredible.'

"He said: 'Why?' I replied: 'First, about four years ago it was all over the papers about someone going to him and trying to get $100,000 to get the bill through. Now here he is again with the same thing. And second, I don't believe that any one of the 21 Councillors would seek a bribe, and third, knowing Dan Carroll as I do, he would not have anything to do with anything like that.

Asks Probe of Alien 'Press Trust' in U. S.

Washington, Jan. 8 (AP)—Senate investigation of charges that foreign interests were making over control of many American newspapers with a view to exercising a monopoly on printing paper, was asked in a resolution offered today by Senator Schall, Republican, Minnesota.

The resolution recalled statements by editor and publisher that a certain group of foreigners in the white paper business had purchased controlling interest in a chain of American newspapers at a cost of $16,000,000.

Luce Has Hopes for Hospital Bill

Washington, Jan. 8 (AP)—Representative Luce, Republican, Massachusetts, said today every effort would be made to obtain passage at this session of the ten million dollar hospitalization bill for the Veterans' Bureau. The measure would provide for the construction of fireproof buildings to replace temporary structures at veterans' hospitals and to establish additional hospitals.

CHIEF BELIEVES MONEY LED TO KILLING

Carver, Jan. 8—The belief that a murder has been revealed after 11 years was expressed by Chief of Police James Lewis today as a result of an examination of the skeleton found in the woods of South Middleboro.

The skeleton, with a cracked skull and a broken jaw, is thought to be that of Patrick Driscoll of Carver, also known as John Williams, who was last seen on January 5, 1917.

While Medical Examiner A. V. Smith of Wareham has made no official finding as to the cause of death, Chief Lewis, who worked on the case at the time of Driscoll's disappearance, is convinced the man was slain.

Driscoll, who worked in the cranberry bogs, lived in a shack in Carver, and was fond of displaying a roll consisting of about $40 in money, padded with slips of paper until it looked much greater.

Chief Lewis believes that Driscoll showed his padded roll in some drinking den, and was followed by a stranger who thought there was enough money in it to make it worth his while. It is the chief's theory that Driscoll was set upon in the woods, beaten into unconsciousness, robbed and left to die.

Worcester's Amber Traffic Law Will Soon Be 'Blue Law'

Worcester, Jan. 8 (AP)—This city has an amber law that will be a blue law soon. Following a ruling by Judge Samuel Utley that motorists may not start upon the amber traffic lights, but must wait for green, it was discovered that no provision was made for the amber lights which go on at 11 p. m. every night and do not go off until 7 a. m. The electric light company will not turn the amber out. The motorists will not wait from 11 till 7 for the green. To pinch or not to pinch becomes the question, with common sense ruling "not."

They seized a freight car billed as baled hay and found 4800 bottles of Canadian ale concealed between the bales. The car was shipped from Sabrevois, Quebec, and consigned to a firm in Westfield, Mass.

Paris, Jan. 8 (INS)—News that the American dancer, Jenny Dolly, one of the Dolly sisters, is shortly to undergo an appendicitis operation revealed today that she plans to marry Jacques Wittouck, Belgian financier and racehorse owner.

Dr. Georges Labey, surgeon of Ladbelsere Hospital, who is treating Miss Dolly, told International News Service:

"Jenny has been ill for some days. She is resting as easily as possible. The date of the operation is indefinite. Further news will have to be obtained from M. Wittouck, whom Miss Dolly is marrying shortly."

M. Wittouck arrived while the interviewer was waiting. He refused, however, to give any information. A servant volunteered the information:

"The marriage is planned to take place as soon as Miss Dolly is convalescent."

QUESTION MARK FLIGHT OPENS NEW AIR ERA

Los Angeles, Jan. 8—A new era in flying was predicted today by aviation experts, as a result of the record flight made by the Army plane, Question Mark, which landed late yesterday afternoon, after being aloft 150 hours and 40 minutes.

So trivial was the motor trouble that caused the plane to land yesterday, that it will be flown to San Diego later today.

In the eyes of army and navy officers the Question Mark's achievement demonstrated the feasibility of refueling in air under a variety of conditions. It caused Rear Admiral W. A. Moffett, chief of naval aviation, to envision round the world non-stop flights. It prompted many aviators to declare that transcontinental and even trans-oceanic flights might soon be commonplace.

SEES WORLD FLIGHTS.

Rear Admiral Moffett declared:

"After this test, as ambitious an experiment as a non-stop flight around the globe now is brought well within the realms of possibility. Motors, ship and men have proved that they are capable of it.

"In this flight, the replenishment of fuel tanks was achieved in a fashion that was entirely practicable and even simple. There is no reason to doubt that such refueling could be arranged from a chain of stations stretching around the globe, as well as it was arranged from a single station in Los Angeles."

FLEW 10,350 MILES.

The Question Mark flew a total of 10,350 miles in her six-and-a-half-day cruise. Only part of this mileage, however, will be taken into official consideration, since the great Army plane was forced to fly in circles for long periods, instead of traveling from point to point in straight flights.

Kills Animals With Short Radio Wave

Jena, Germany, Jan. 7 (AP)—Prof. Esau, who has been experimenting with ultra short radio waves is reported to have discovered they will kill small animals on contact and will destroy bacteria cultures. This has led to the hypothesis that they may be put to surgical purposes.

With an entire sender occupying only the space contained in a clear box he has succeeded in sending 250 miles without an aerial.

Wife of Smallpox Victim Taken Sick

Springfield, Jan. 8 (AP)—A second case of smallpox was reported today to the health authorities when the wife of John C. MacMillan, who developed the disease some fortnight ago, was pronounced ill with the disease, which she contracted through contact with her husband. The 25 other persons who were exposed to the disease through contact with Mr. MacMillan, have nearly all been released from observation.

JAIL EX-PRISON GUARD IN LETTER SMUGGLING CASE

COURT SCORES PRISONER AS 'RENEGADE'

After being characterized from the bench as a renegade soldier delivering messages to the enemy, Theodore F. Miller of Warren st., Roxbury, former State Prison guard, was sentenced today in Superior Court to one year in the House of Correction.

Miller, a former traffic officer in the Boston police department, a few minutes before had pleaded guilty to a charge of illicitly conveying a letter from a convict in the prison to a fellow convict in the Norfolk Prison Camp.

"You are like a soldier at the front in the face of the enemy, who turns from his duty and carries a message into the enemy camp," said Chief Justice Perley Hall before passing sentence.

"You were on the side of the convicts against law and order. Your acts strike at the very root of our civilization."

Asst. Dist. Atty. Doyle, prosecuting the case, told Chief Justice Hall that Miller was detected as the result of a slipup on a convict's part. In addressing a letter to his friend at Norfolk.

A card came back to the prison from the postoffice stating that the letter, because of an incorrect address, was waiting at the Central postoffice in Cambridge.

The card was addressed to Miller, but was received by a turnkey, Fred Pflueger. A short time later Pflueger was shot to death in the prison by a convict, Charles Trippi, who now faces a murder charge.

Miller admitted that he received $1 for carrying the letter out of the prison and mailing it.

AXE SWINGS AS REVERE MAYOR TAKES POST

Assuming office today as mayor of Revere, Andrew A. Casassa announced he had accepted the resignation of one city official, demanded that of another, and added he considered all the appointments of his predecessor, Dr. John B. Walsh, ended when the latter left office.

The first resignation which Mayor Casassa accepted was that of Francis Christenson, sealer of weights and measures for four years. The resignation asked for was that of Commissioner of Public Works Michael J. O'Donnell.

GIRL EMPLOYES GO.

Among the first to feel the official axe were three girl employes in the mayor's office, namely: Miss Anna Walsh, daughter of the former mayor, and his secretary; Miss Marie Dunsbee, stenographer, and Miss Josephine M. Barry purchasing clerk. As Miss Barry is a civil service appointee, the mayor laid her off for [illegible].

Mr. Casassa said he will name his own stenographer and clerk tomorrow and on Monday night will submit to the council the names of appointees for the office of commissioner of public charities, superintendent of buildings, inside wire inspector, city solicitor, city electrician and city engineer.

The mayor said he would handle the Department of Public Works until next Monday night, when his successor will be named at a meeting of the City Council, together with those of a number of other officials as yet unnamed.

TAKES OVER DUTIES

The new mayor arrived at his office at 9 o'clock, where he found his desk covered by congratulatory messages, while the room was filled with floral tributes.

Mayor Casassa's first official act was to sign a payroll presented by City Auditor Robert M. Copeland. Mrs. Vivian T. Lockhart, who was his secretary before the election, became official private secretary, a position which she held under three former mayors.

The mayor said a complaint clerk, which he advocated in the campaign, and other members of his official family, will be named tomorrow. He added he had received 700 applications for positions.

Fliers Honor Crash Victim at Funeral

Stamford, Ct., Jan. 8 (AP)—To the drone of airplane motors, for most sound he probably heard before he passed from his body, Edward Channell Carrington, 24-year-old pilot, who crashed to his death, was laid to rest today.

Simple services were held in St. John's Episcopal Church, while two planes from Boston hovered overhead. The planes dipped low as the flag-draped casket left the church and followed the hearse to Woodland cemetery, where they paid homage to the departed flier in circular aerial bows.

Ex-Mayor Larrabee of Melrose Dead

Ex-Mayor John Larrabee, 73, of Melrose, one of the most distinguished citizens of that city, died today at his home on West Foster st., after a long illness. He was the second mayor, and also held the offices of town and city treasurer and others. For two years he represented the district in the Legislature.

He was a member of the drug firm of Larrabee & Stearns for 50 years and was president of the Melrose Savings Bank. He leaves a wife, two sons and a daughter.

NEIGHBORS RESCUE THEM

Stanley Mellerup, 5, and his sister Frances, 7 (staff photo), were taken from their burning home at 38 Crescent st., Cambridge, early this morning before the firemen arrived. Other members of the family were taken out by firemen.

Pupils Drink Their Hot Chocolate Under Guard

Yarmouthport, Jan. 8 (AP)—Hot chocolate was served this noon by members of the Parent-Teachers Association to children of John Simpkins school here. The peaceful occasion is worthy of note, because yesterday hot chocolate was poured down the domestic science room sink by an angry school committeewoman. Refreshment, authorized by the majority of the school committee, couldn't be served to the children until arrival of a state policeman.

Mrs. Amy Clark, Mrs. Ann Whelden and Mrs. Ruth Pulsifer, all P. T. A. members, planned to serve chocolate yesterday. As the beverage simmered on the stove, Miss Martha W. Howes, school committee member, interrupted. They assert Miss Howes poured out the chocolate and smashed several milk bottles.

When the state policeman arrived a new mixture was made and the chocolate finally served. Miss Howes' objection is supposed to be based on opposition to the Parent Teacher Association.

GOES ON TRIAL IN BEACH ST. DEATH CRASH

High speed, maintained by the "gross and criminal negligence" of former Motorman Bernard A. McDonald, caused the Boston Elevated train wreck last July on the structure at Harrison ave. and Beach st., Asst. Dist. Atty. Frederick T. Doyle told a Superior Court jury today.

McDonald's trial began shortly before noon.

Doyle asserted the government would show that at the time of the crash, which killed three persons and injured more than 20, McDonald was running the train at a speed of 30 to 40 miles an hour.

Experts, said Doyle, will testify that safety at the Harrison ave.-Beach st. turn requires a speed not greater than 10 or 12 miles an hour.

HAD "PERFECT TRACK"

McDonald is charged with operating a public conveyance in a grossly negligent manner. If convicted, he will face a maximum sentence of a $500 fine or two-and-one-half years in jail or both.

First of the government's witnesses was Harry Stewart, superintendent of maintenance and repair of engineers for the Boston Elevated.

Stewart testified, under direct examination, that he inspected the scene the day after the crash and found the track "perfect."

VAHEY CONDUCTS DEFENSE.

Stewart was closely questioned as to the proper speed, in his opinion, for rounding the Harrison ave.-Beach st. curve. He declared that, after scientific tests, he satisfied himself that trains should be slowed to at least 10 miles an hour at the point where the accident occurred.

Stewart was cross-examined by Atty. James H. Vahey, counsel for the defendant.

The government today summoned 13 witnesses in all. They included passengers who were on the wrecked train and also included police officers, firemen and newspapermen who aided in the rescue work.

INDICTMENT OF ANOTHER MAY SAVE CERO

Asst. Dist. Atty. William H. McDonnell and a special grand jury were today hearing Billy Bone evidence in connection with the North End murder for which Gaudi Cero, convicted killer, is now awaiting execution within the week.

Cero, himself, with the electric chair only a few days or hours away, was ready to be brought from the State Prison death house to the Suffolk Superior Court, there to appear at 2 o'clock to hear new developments in his case.

These developments were to be of "utmost importance," according to the district attorney's office.

Defense counsel, at present asking for a new trial for Cero, were confident today that a new murder indictment would be forthcoming, charging, Cero, but another man with the principal role in the shooting of Joseph Fantasia, of which Cero was found guilty.

Known to be among the witnesses before the grand jury today was Philomena Romano, 24-year-old East Boston girl, who told—and later repudiated—a story to the effect that she saw another man than Cero fire the fatal shots.

Also among those to testify today was Louise Smith, eye witness of the killing. There were 20 witnesses called in all.

NARCOTIC FARM BILL BEFORE COOLIDGE

By WILLIAM S. NEAL
(International News Service Staff Correspondent)

Washington, Jan. 8—The signature of President Coolidge to the "narcotic farms" bill, which has just passed the Senate, will inaugurate a new experiment in the world-wide fight on the drug evil, it was declared by leaders of the fight here today.

The bill authorized appropriations, which are expected to follow, for the building of two "narcotic farms" as a part of the federal prisons system. All drug addicts who can be cured will be segregated from other federal prisoners and treated as diseased persons on the farms, instead of as criminals.

"I am confident that carrying out of this plan will not only make history in the fight on the drug traffic in the United States, but will set an example which other nations of the world will find hard to ignore," said Rep. Stephen Porter (R.) of Pennsylvania, author of the measure.

"Already the American fight against the drug evil, and particularly against sanction of production and sale of drugs by foreign governments, has had effects. These foreign governments will now see that the United States is forced to build institutions to care for the addicts which they make by providing the drugs."

Porter made known that he is making an independent investigation of the sale of smuggled drugs in this country which were manufactured in one or more European countries with government consent and in violation of the opium treaties.

President Coolidge is expected to approve the bill and the House special prisons investigating committee, now holding hearings, is expected to make a strong plea for appropriations with which to begin immediate construction of the institutions.

Testimony given by Capt. A. H. O'Connor, superintendent of federal prisons, before the committee disclosed that approximately one-third of all federal prisoners are either "dope fiends" or in prison for illegal sale of drugs.

The Congressional fight on the drug evil was endorsed by Madame Sarijini Naidu, noted Indian poet and feminist leader, who said that the United States would set an example for the rest of the world.

INSURANCE LOBBY FIGHTS GOODWIN BILL

INSURANCE COMPANIES IN MOVE TO SAVE PROFITS

State legislators are being approached by representatives of private insurance companies in Massachusetts in an attempt to defeat the bill of Frank A. Goodwin, former state registrar of motor vehicles, which provides for a state fund to supply compulsory automobile insurance at cost.

Although Goodwin's bill, passage of which would save $7,500,000 a year for automobile owners of Massachusetts, was filed only yesterday, the Boston Evening American has learned that insurance companies were at work at least 10 days before its filing, in their efforts to "kill" it.

Rep. Tony A. Garofano of Saugus is one of the legislators who was approached.

"A week and a half ago I was approached by a solicitor of an insurance company in Lynn," said Rep. Garofano. "He said to me, 'I have been selected as a committee of one to see you and ask you how you will vote on the bill to be filed by Frank Goodwin for filing for a state fund to supply compulsory automobile insurance at cost.'

REFUSED REQUEST

"He asked me to vote against the Goodwin bill, but I told him that I would vote for any measure, such as the Goodwin bill, that would take compulsory automobile insurance away from the private companies and have the State supply it at cost."

Governor Frank D. Allen is convinced that the present method of fixing rates on compulsory automobile insurance is unfair. In his inaugural address he said:

"Up to the present time the commissioner of insurance has had to depend upon information furnished him by the insurance companies. The motor vehicle owners of this Commonwealth can never be convinced that rates based upon data furnished by the insurance companies are just, reasonable and non-discriminatory. They are justified in their opinion that in this important matter the records of all companies, both foreign and domestic, should be examined in the same manner as the law now requires the Commonwealth to examine its domestic companies.

In commenting on Governor Allen's proposed remedy, Goodwin said:

"Wesley D. Monk, until recently insurance commissioner of Massachusetts, said that it would be absolutely impossible for the State to get the information in question by examination of the books of all the 93 insurance companies doing business in Massachusetts.

"Mr. Monk told me there is not enough room at the State House for all the men necessary to examine the books of all the insurance companies, whose home offices are in Germany, England and elsewhere. The cost would be prohibitive, and so the State must continue to take the figures of the insurance companies under the present system.

"The Car Owners Mutual Co. in its report to the insurance commissioner, recorded 2800 unpaid claims. Now it develops that there are 7500 additional claims the company did not. This was disclosed by the recover.

"The only power the insurance commissioner has it to see that the insurance companies charge enough, or in other words 'adequate' premiums. I do not think the commissioner has ever had to exercise that power because the insurance companies have been stingy about their charges."

In addition, Mr. Goodwin said:

"Regardless of insurance company propaganda and surface appearances, the Massachusetts compulsory insurance act has been a remarkable success. It was passed to compel owners of motor vehicles to be financially responsible so that persons killed or injured could get compensation.

"It was not passed as a safety measure, but has turned out to be. The insurance companies and other enemies of our law are advocating the Connecticut law. Let us compare it to the two laws.

"Massachusetts requires insurance before the car is allowed on the road. Connecticut requires insurance only for those who get into accidents and kill or injure. In other words, Connecticut locks the stable after the horse has been stolen.

GOOD SAFETY MEASURE

"Let us compare the fatal accidents in Massachusetts and Connecticut during the two years the laws have been in effect. In 1926 there were 1000 killed in Connecticut, and in 1928 this number jumped to 450, an increase of 35 per cent.

"In Massachusetts in 1926 there were 705 killed and this only increased 10 in the two years, for in 1928 716 were killed, an increase of 1½ per cent.

"Let us see further. The population of Connecticut is about 1,700,000, which means that one person in every 1700 was killed, while in Massachusetts, with a population of 4,200,000, there was only one person killed in every 5860.

FIGURES SHOW MERITS

"Again, in Connecticut one person was killed for every 218 cars registered, while in Massachusetts there were 1218 cars registered for every person killed. These figures conclusively dispose of the contention that the Connecticut plan is better.

"Basically, the Massachusetts law is sound. Still, there are abuses that must be remedied.

"First, if the State says to one of its citizens, 'you must insure,' it has no right to compel that citizen to go up to the counter of an insurance company and pay out his money for commissions, profits, big salaries, and unnecessary overhead. It is under obligations to provide the service at cost.

"Second, the zone system is nonsense and never should have been permitted. When the registrar of motor vehicles issues a registration he fixes no limits within which the car may go. If there are more accidents in congested areas, citizens of these areas who are careful and escape accidents should not be penalized because of the congestion caused in most cases by persons living outside the area.

"Third, there are millions of dollars handed out on false claims because there is no provision for immediate investigation except in fatal cases.

"The law requires prompt investigation by the registry department of every accident resulting in death, with the result that no false claims are made in such cases. In 1927, there were 31,721 cases reported to the registry by the police, operators and clipping bureaus of persons injured investigated at the time of the accident or immediately after.

"The insurance commission report that they settled 34,988 injury cases in 1927 and had 13,531 cases unsettled.

CROOKED CLAIMS

"Here we have 48,519 claims made to insurance companies against the money paid by motorists, with only 31,721 reported as required by law. This difference was made up for the most part by crooked claims. The insurance companies knew nothing of most of these claims until weeks or months after the accidents, and by the time claim agents started to investigate the doctors and lawyers had the witnesses and plaintiffs coached so that the companies were helpless and were compelled to settle.

"There is only one remedy to these abuses, and that is to have the State handle the situation. There are only two arguments against the State fund.

"First, socialism! The State should not go into business! It must be apparent to any sensible person that this argument does not hold water. It is wrong for the Government to go into business if it interferes with private initiative, but when the State says to its citizens that they must insure, it becomes governmental compulsion and ceases to be within the realm of private initiative.

This is particularly true with reference to the payment of commissions for getting the business when everyone must insure if he wants to run his car and would find the insurance company's office if he never saw an agent.

"Second—politics! Well there are ten crooks in business to every one in politics, and the only time men holding public office are crooks is when the business men bribe them.

"Senator Bacon, recently being elected president of the Senate, said: 'President Coolidge once said as applied to Massachusetts: Our public men as a class are inspired by honorable and patriotic motives, deserving only of a faithful execution of their trust. Public administration is honest and sound and the public business is transacted on a higher plane than private business.'

"Under the bill I have filed the State fund will be administered under the direct control of the governor and council and it is an insult to them to say it will not be administered honestly."

A car needs a home. Have you a garage for rent? Tell about it and give location in the Want Boat Ads. That's the way to fill it.

What Is Said for Goodwin Plan

Under the law proposed by Frank A. Goodwin, former State registrar of motor vehicles, a flat rate of $16 would be charged by the State as compulsory insurance for every passenger car, this sum to be paid when the certificate of registration was issued. The certificate of registration would serve as an insurance policy. The present zoning system, which Mr. Goodwin and thousands of motorists regard as unfair, would be done away with.

The sum of $25 would be charged, under the Goodwin plan, for compulsory insurance, on each truck. Fifty dollars each would be paid for taxicabs, rental cars and buses.

Under this plan the sum of $12,367,804 would be raised, based upon the registrations of last year. If Mr. Goodwin's proposed law was effective now, a saving of $7,500,000 would result for the car owners of Massachusetts. Of this amount $3,000,000 would be for commissions to insurance agents.

INSURANCE ON AUTOS CALLED FAILURE

New York, Jan. 8—The National Automobile Dealers' Association in session in connection with the 29th automobile show heard a strong address against compulsory insurance of automobiles.

Day Baker of Boston, secretary of the Massachusetts Automobile and Garage Owners' Association, told the dealers of the "Two Years Compulsory Insurance in Massachusetts," and said the first failure of he law was that it did not provide for property damage.

The insurance law is one of the outstanding questions that the dealers will face during the coming year, as almost every state in which a legislature meets this year will have a bill presented for such a law.

Baker pointed out that as a result of the compulsory damage clause in the insurance law, almost every accident is exaggerated claims or of nervous shock, so that the owner might recover sufficient money in this fashion to pay for damage to his car.

He said the law was so far from perfect that it failed to even accomplish one part of the ideals it sponsors and urged other states not to attempt passage of such a measure.

290 NEW CASES OF INFLUENZA IN STATE

There were 290 new cases of influenza, 109 of them in Boston, reported today to the State Board of Health.

These bring the total for the first week of January to 1115 against a total for the entire month in December of only 824 cases.

On the same ratio compiled figured, all of January 2000 cases reported approximately 400 cases.

Against the 290 new cases reported today from all over the State there were but 28 cases reported on the same date last year.

Flu Cases Declining in Western States

Washington, Jan. 8 (INS)—The influenza epidemic is increasing in the Middle Atlantic and Northeastern States, but gradually declining in the West, according to reports today to the Public Health Service.

For the week ending January 5 reports were received from 23 states and New ork city. They showed a total of 61,970 new cases, compared to 76,000 the week previous. The decrease in the total resulted from the decline in the disease in the West.

NINE CHILDREN SAVED AT FIRE IN BEACHMONT

pher, one of nine children, and then assisted the others to the street.

The Winthrop blaze started in the dress store of Louis C. Sundard at 304 Shirley st., spreading in one direction to Nathan Goldberg's delicatessen store at 269, and to Caplan's fruit store at 297. In the other direction the fire damaged M. Brown's grocery store at 306, Bertolami's dry goods store at 308A and the Winthrop Meat Market at 308. The cause was not determined. Residents of nearby houses fled to the street.

Stanley, five, Charles, 12, and Frances, seven, children of Mr. and Mrs. Jean Mellerup of 38 Crescent st., Cambridge, were taken down a rickety ladder by neighbors when fire, caused by spontaneous combustion in the cellar, swept through the two-story home.

Firemen who arrived just as the children reached the street forbade the use of the ladder again, and took the parents down on one of their ladders.

The fire was discovered by Mellerup, who was aroused by smoke. Finding the telephone out of order, he shouted to neighbors from a window, and then saw that his family, Mellerup attempted to lower his oldest boy from the second floor by means of a rope, but when he was frightened he had to give up the attempt. No estimate of the damage was given.

The Roxbury fire, which necessitated sounding three alarms and which burned out the old Robbins mansion, was believed to have been caused by a furnace. Official report was made by Fire Commissioner Hultman to State Fire Marshal Neal, resting findings of Boston fire officials that the cause was of an origin which warranted investigation.

Worcester, Jan. 8 (AP)—A blazing ball of fire came hurtling out of a closet in a burning three-story house at 497 Grafton st. and clung to the breast of Fireman John Boyce of Hose 11, scratching and snarling, for several moments before the startled fireman realized that it was a pet cat with its fur on fire. Boyce's clothing did not ignite. Severe scratches and minor burns on his hands and wrists were his only injuries.

The fire started because a small boy thought it would be fun to build a bonfire in the cellar. Several firemen narrowly escaped being overcome by smoke and leaking illuminating gas when a gas connection was burned off.

SAID HE KILLED "WITCH"

ACCUSED OF BURNING BODY

John Blymer, with sheriff at left, Associated Press photo, going to court in York, Pa., where he is accused of having slain 60-year-old recluse who he regarded as a witch that held a "curse" upon a neighboring family, one of whose members testifies against the defendant.

TRIED TO BURN UP BODY OF 'WITCH'

hair. He said he would dig a hole and put it eight feet under ground and in that way would break the spell Rehmeyer had cast over my father and mother.

"Next day, the day of the murder, he said he needed help in the job. He said Rehmeyer was so big he would need some one to hold him while he started to cut the lock from his hair. He asked me to go with him and help him do it. I refused."

Witness admitted, however, that his brother Wilbert agreed to go along with the "pow-wow" doctor. He, Clayton Hess, drove Blymyer, Curry and Wilbert Hess to the Rehmeyer farm. Mrs. Hess, wife of the witness, went along in the machine.

MET THANKSGIVING EVE.

Witness said he next saw Blymyer, Wilbert Hess and Curry on Thanksgiving eve, after the murder. They came to the Hess farm.

Q.—Did you know Rehmeyer was dead. A.—Yes. Blymyer asked me to take him to the Rehmeyer home and said that if it was not burned down he wanted to burn it.

After killing the so-called "witch" the trio had set fire to the body. The body was burned, but the house did not catch fire.

Q.—What else did Blymyer say? A.—He said, "If they get me I hope they don't get the other two boys. I am the one to blame for this."

Hess said Blymyer told him he believed Rehmeyer to be a "wicked witch."

David Van Oven told how he and another farmer went to Rehmeyer's house, pushed open the kitchen door and saw the victim lying on the floor.

BODY PARTLY BURNED.

"Rehmeyer was badly burned," he testified. "I saw a lump on one side of him. It was lying on its side. There were pieces of a chair lying around. He had been hit with it, apparently.

"There were blood spots around."

Dr. William C. Livingston, who officially pronounced Rehmeyer dead, also described the murder scene.

"I found the entire body charred and rope marks around the neck," the doctor said. "The rope was cut deeply in places. The skull was fractured."

Coroner L. U. Zech identified the paraphernalia used in the crime—the broken chair, the butter cups and pieces of blood-stained wood.

The jury leaned over in the box. The spectators craned their necks. Absolute silence prevailed at this juncture. Many in the audience were of a type that are inherently superstitious by nature.

Detective Ralph Keech, who arrested Blymyer, testified that when brought to the district attorney's office Blymyer confessed voluntarily.

"He admitted he struck Blymyer with the chair, the witness said.

"His jacket became bloody in the struggle and he burned it in the stove," he said. Curry and he were present and at times Blymyer sought to put the blame on them for something. He was in doubt as to who poured the coal oil on the body."

The detective testified that Blymyer said after they had killed Rehmeyer they went upstairs and got some money out of a bureau drawer. Blymyer gave Hess $1 and Hess felt he had been "gypped."

BODY OF NURSE IS EXHUMED IN DEATH CASE

The body of Miss Mary E. Lee, 35-year-old nurse, for whose alleged murder Arthur J. Manning of Somerville is held without bail, was exhumed today in Oak Grove Cemetery, Winthrop st., Medford.

An autopsy will be performed in an effort to ascertain definitely the cause of death.

Previously, and without autopsy, the cause of death was given on the death certificate as a fracture of the skull—accidental.

The body of the woman was removed to the Northern Mortuary in Neith Terrace st., during that the autopsy would be performed by Medical Examiner George H. Magrath, in charge of the northern district of Suffolk County.

Miss Lee, up to the time of her death, had been acting as housekeeper for Manning, according to his own admission to the police.

Two weeks ago he sent for a physician, who found that the woman's eyes were discolored and that bruises marked her body.

As she appeared to be suffering from a head injury she was removed to the hospital, where she died some hours later from a fractured skull.

Manning told the doctor, and also the police, that the woman fell down stairs at his home.

Her funeral services were held at the Manning house and she was buried in Oak Grove Cemetery.

An investigation was begun by the Somerville police, however, with the Middlesex District Attorney's office co-operating.

As a result of the investigation, Manning finally was arrested, and yesterday was held without bail on a murder charge when arraigned in Somerville Court.

He now is in East Cambridge jail.

RICKARD'S BODY RESTS IN NEW GARDEN

mother's body arrived from Miami aboard the Florida special, the gallery fans and those of the millionaire six Hundred Club pressed their faces against the train bars. Few of Rickard's personal friends even were permitted to meet the funeral cars.

FEW ADMITTED

So it was at the Garden. Few but policemen were admitted. The bronze casket with its blankets of roses and carnations poised quietly on a supporter with four rubber-tired wheels. The body entered the building at the lower entrance furnished a rainy setting, the rain showing through the upper windows. Jack Dempsey, his loyal friend; Steve Hannigan, Rickard's personal Miami representative and Billy Gibson, fight manager, stood in the shadows talking over what a great guy the "Big Chief" was.

MORE FLORAL GIFTS

Undertaker attendants rushed in looking important, bearing more and more floral gifts. There were new ones from the Madison Square Garden employes, marked "To farewell." A group of these workmen stood in the doorway watching where their tribute was placed.

"Everybody out, everybody out," shouted the police.

It seemed that they were to take a death-mask of Rickard. Then they were to drape the entire arena in mourning and dress the amphitheater in formal.

ARRIVES IN CITY.

Tex Rickard returned to Broadway today. Hailed by flowers and floral offerings worth thousands of dollars, the casket containing the body of the dead promoter was borne into the Pennsylvania station in the baggage car of the Florida special at exactly 10:47 a. m.

Just as had been his lot in life, Rickard found crowds in death. And a substantial one was the same crowd that assembled around him in Jersey City in New York, in Philadelphia, in Chicago, the scenes of his greatest promotional efforts, that sorrowfully saw his homecoming today.

The terminal was jammed when the great bronze casket in which the sports king's body rested was carried from the train. They were all there, the gallery gods, the ringside scalpers, the mink-coaters, the preliminary boys, the managers, the writers, the sparring partners. The fighters, the aerialists, a few of the same figures that were seen at every fight staged by the master promoter.

There were numerous celebrities, men of big affairs and big purses, in the crowd also.

Police Commissioner Grover A. Whalen himself was on hand to see that 46 of his finest officers handled the throng with the gentleness and restraint the occasion demanded.

One hundred mounted policemen escorted the body up Broadway for 16 blocks to Madison Square Garden, Rickard's own temple.

After the casket was carried into the auditorium, the widow, Mrs. Maxine Hodges Rickard; Jack Dempsey, Walter Fields, Miss Jacobs, Miss Naomi Lawrenson and Arthur Driscoll left the train.

All were somber and quiet. Mrs. Rickard was dressed in dark clothes and wore a veil of intense mourning. Dempsey, the Tiger Man, was pale and drawn.

Mrs. Roosevelt Sails

Oyster Bay, N. Y., Jan. 8 (AP)—Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt, widow of the former President, will sail on Saturday in the liner George Washington for a visit with friends in Switzerland.

BARBER SLAYER FACES DEATH EDICT JAN. 25

Salem, Jan. 8 (AP)—George Elmer Harrison Taylor, itinerant barber, convicted of the murder on June 5, 1927, of Stella Pontbriand of Lawrence, will be sentenced to death in the superior chair in Essex County Superior Court here at 2:45 p. m. Friday, January 25, the government has announced.

Taylor was recently refused a new trial by the Supreme Court. Miss Pontbriand was found slain on Salisbury Beach, where she had been employed as a photographer's assistant. A pair of sun glasses discovered near the body eventually led to suspicion on Taylor, who was traced to Hyde Park, Vt., where he was arrested. Subsequently he was convicted of murder in the first degree.

At the same time the government will move for sentence of Harold Congdon and other selectmen and officials of Salisbury convicted of various rum running charges.

WARMER WAVE TO CHASE COLD OUT OF TOWN

Having repulsed the first full wave attack of winter with only slight casualties, New England today settled down to enjoy a return of higher temperatures, officially promised to arrive hereabouts tomorrow.

Despite the frigid drive from the west, where the mercury had slumped to marks well below zero in its path, the silvery column in Greater Boston held fast to a minimum of 17 above, a degree higher than the low notch of the current season, registered here on Saturday.

The promise of warmer weather did not end today by the local forecaster in terms of "temperatures to issue on a wave of comparative warmth spreading eastward today from the Dakotas, where the temperature has climbed 43 degrees over the past 24 hours.

While Boston felt the slight sting of the aborted frigid blast through the night and early morning, northern New England fared much worse, Subzero marks were the rule throughout that section, with Greenville, Me., reporting the lowest temperature of 19 below.

Forecast for Boston and vicinity: Partly cloudy, with rising temperature tonight and Wednesday; fresh winds mostly from the west and southwest.

The death toll in Chicago as a direct result of the sub-zero wave reached four today.

Death Takes "Steeple Jim," Mission Worker

Boston, Jan. 8—James A. Parker, an evangelist known as "Steeple Jim," who for two years has been conducting a mission in this city, died today at the Brighton Hospital after two days' illness. He was 48 years old.

Parker, who, following his conversion, was a prizefighter, not above drawing attention to his mission by spectacular stunts. A steeplejack in his youth, during the past two years he has frequently climbed the City Hall flagpole while assistants took up a collection from the assembled crowd.

Exemption of Short Line Roads Opposed

Washington, Jan. 8 (AP)—Opposition of the Interstate Commerce Commission to a proposal to amend the interstate commerce act to exempt certain short line railroads from the clause permitting the government to recapture excess earnings was expressed today before the House commerce committee by Commissioner Frank McManamy.

He said different treatment of the carriers in regard to the recapture of excess earnings would result in unfair discrimination. Bird M. Robinson, president of the American Short Line Railway Association, urging enactment of the measure, declared it was unfair to take from railroads the peak earnings of good years and leave the bad ones to take care of themselves.

GIRLS ARE HAPPY AFTER FACING DEATH

Woods Hole, Jan. 8—While the wrecked New Bedford schooner, Josephine S. Grey, was pounding to pieces here today on the rocks of Nobska Point, her skipper was said to be among the passengers, including Marguerite Gilcrest, 6, and Dorothy Oliveira, 8, nurse on their way back to their New Bedford homes.

None of the eight persons rescued from the vessel during the storm of last night was seriously affected by the exposure and peril. Two members of the crew suffered from slight frozen hands and face. Richard Gilcrest, father of the little girl, was among the passengers, including Mrs. Oliveira, mother of Dorothy. The vessel, owned by Manuel Oliveira of New Bedford, was driven on the Martha's Vineyard shore. The schooner itself was definitely abandoned today. It had broken in two and was submerged by the incoming tide until only its masts were visible. Coastguard officials believed there would be a possibility of salvaging some cargo.

Capt. Jose Perry of New Bedford was master of the vessel. He went home today, but may return with a salvage crew if the schooner's owners so direct.

England's Oldest Resident Now 107

London, Jan. 8 (AP)—William Walker, believed to be England's oldest resident, celebrated his 107th birthday today. He received a present from the Lord Mayor of Nottingham.

Walker started work as a framework knitter when he was 12 years old. When he was 81 years old he went on strike for more money and when the strike proved unsuccessful, he decided not to work any more.

FEAR 21 DEAD IN CHILEAN ERUPTION

Buenos Aires, Jan. 8 (AP)—With five bodies recovered from ruins caused by the eruption of the Calbuin volcano Calbuco near Lake Llanquihue, it appeared possible today that the lava had taken a toll of 21 lives.

Dispatches from Puerto Montt said cablegrams had unconfirmed reports that five families, totaling 22 persons, were missing. These families lived in the region which was ravaged and ashes over it. Other dispatches said many injured had been taken from the stricken area to Puerto Varas, across Lake Llanquihue. Hundreds of homeless persons are reported as having fled to the mountains.

All boats on the 20-mile wide lake were pressed into service for the rescue work. After the people had been brought to safety cattle were being taken from the grazing land upon which the hot ashes were falling. Hot water also was streaming from the snow-clad volcano into the lake.

The disturbance was said to be subsiding today. The threatened district is largely settled by Germans and the people were regaining confidence with the lessening of volcano activity.

OPERATION MAY 'KILL OR FREE' BOY CRIMINAL

Cleveland, O., Jan. 8 (AP)—Death or freedom and a new chance await 17 Arthur Bejny, 15-year-old "bad boy" convicted of robbing the mails of the city in a hospital here today. Fighting for recovery from an operation for removal of an [illegible] from his brain, performed in an effort to correct his tendencies to crime.

With the entry of an order by Federal Judge Paul Jones today declaring execution of a sentence of the lower at the Washington armstrong school for robbing the new Cuyahoga postoffice, the Government enters into the experiment whereby it is hoped the lad can be cured and set right.

Arthur will be given the opportunity, if he recovers, to return to his home, and if he does recover he will go with the good wishes of Miss Irene Nungesser, assistant district attorney, who urged that the operation be performed.

She became interested in the case when the boy admitted taking 60 letters from a mail box of the Ohio Cities Telephone Company containing $1000 in checks. He cashed one of the checks but destroyed the others and told Miss Nungesser that he knew of no reason for taking them.

After his trial two weeks ago and his commitment to jail until a sentence was imposed, he began to complain of headaches and when Miss Nungesser learned of it she arranged an X-ray examination which revealed the abscess.

The operation was performed a week ago. He was to have been sentenced to await the outcome of the experiment.

H. A. JONES, 77, AUTHOR, DEAD

London, Jan. 8 (AP)—Henry Arthur Jones, author of 28 produced plays, is dead at the age of 77. He died at his home in Hampstead of lung complaint.

Of late years Jones had been writing on social questions rather than for the theater, and in the latest edition of Who's Who he described his recreation as "Hunting Sedition." In 1924-5 he carried on a vigorous newspaper polemic against Bolshevism and against the views of H. G. Wells and George Bernard Shaw. Some of these were published in the book "Mid Dear Wells."

Mr. Shaw, when informed of the death, said: "I have paid so many tributes to the work of Jones when it was really of some use to him that I do not see any need to pay tribute now when it cannot gratify him. We remained good friends to the last."

Police Start Target Practice Thursday

Lutz of the police school. This year no member of the department will be excused from practice outside of those who are on sick leave. Practice will be held daily, except on Saturday and Sunday.

Mystery in Wrecked Auto on House Steps

A discouraged appearing wreck of an automobile resting against the front concrete steps at his home at Joseph M. Donovan, 1921 Dorchester ave., Ashmont, gave Dorchester police a mystery today.

The car, registered in the name of Hilton Dean, but with a strange driver, had first left the road, skidded past trees and a trolley pole, losing a rear wheel. Police were endeavoring to locate the driver.

What? Profiteering in Garlic in U. S.!

New York, Jan. 8 (INS)—After seedless grapefruit today comes "warm" ice cream, as announced in a food magazine, which, by the way, declares there has been criminal profiteering in the United States in garlic since the flu epidemic became wide-spread.

Girl, 8, Hit by Truck

Lucy Tosworth, 8, of Beach st., Charlestown was struck by a motor truck at Beach and Medford sts. on her way to school today, and was taken to Haymarket Relief station with a possible fractured skull. The truck was operated by John J. Francesco of Endicott st., Salem, police reported.

MOSES OPEN TO COMPROMISE ON TREATY

Washington, Jan. 8 (AP)—Senate negotiations for a compromise on an interpretive declaration to accompany the Kellogg anti-war treaty were resumed today, after an early collapse of the conference had brought a renewal of debate on the floor.

As leaders went into new conferences, seeking an agreement which would permit a final vote on the pact within a day or two, Senator Moses, Republican, New Hampshire, the author of the controversial interpretative resolution, placed his case before the Senate.

He declared that Great Britain and other world powers, in correspondence accompanying their acceptance of the treaty, had made reservations to their adherence. He said he would not be counted among those "who are willing to 'go it blind' in the matter of our relations with the rest of the world."

Senator Moses left the way open, however for a compromise on his resolution, which has been opposed as unnecessary by President Coolidge and Chairman Borah of the foreign relations committee, in charge of the treaty. He suggested four methods of expressing this country's views of the treaty.

Before Senator Moses opened the argument for the "reservationists," Senator Bruce, Democrat, Maryland, announced he would support the treaty as a "gesture" and would not vote for any reservations or accompanying resolutions.

The proposals outlined by Moses were:

"(1)—The Senate may attach formal reservations which would require the assent of the other signatories upon exchange of ratification.

"(2)—The Senate may express its own interpretations of the treaty in the form of a resolution which the Secretary of State might embody in a note to the other powers in transmitting the ratification.

"(3)—The Secretary of State might, even now, in complete harmony with the procedure already observed in the preliminary negotiations, address a note to the other signatories stating fully our own official understanding of the nature of the commitments entered into by the United States. This note would thus become an integral part of the negotiations, and therefore safeguard our position quite as much as Great Britain and France have safeguarded theirs.

"(4)—A report in like terms from the Committee on Foreign Relations duly read into the congressional record here and transmitted by the Secretary of State to the signatory powers with his notice of our ratification would likewise serve the purpose."

HOOVER CALLS OFF BALL

Washington, Jan. 8 (AP)—One phase of the speculation that has swirled about the return of Herbert Hoover was definitely quieted today when he gave his approval to the March 4 inaugural plans—of a simple nature.

Beyond the official ceremony of oath-taking at the Capitol, the program calls for a parade chiefly of military units. The inaugural ball of other days will be omitted.

Beginning a second day of conference, Herbert Hoover chatted over the breakfast table for more than an hour today with one of his outstanding campaigners, Senator Borah of Idaho.

Like other callers, Senator Borah was hesitant to report any views of the President-elect or to detail the conversation, but it was understood the discussion included a thorough analysis of the legislative situation and the problems confronting the new administration.

A delegation today gave Mr. Hoover the name of D. Pierce of Des Moines as a candidate for Secretary of Agriculture in the next administration.

Representative Edith Nourse Rogers of Massachusetts discussed with Mr. Hoover possibilities of developing trade with Latin America, a subject in which she has been interested for years and about which she shares many of Mr. Hoover's views.

Soldier Chooses Jail Over Army

Brockton, Jan. 8.—Expressing a preference for the county jail at Plymouth rather than returning to his soldier life at Fort Strong, Philip Lewis, 17, of Gladstone st., this city, was allowed his choice by Judge William G. Rowe in District court.

The youth was given a sentence of 30 days at Plymouth jail, on a charge of using an automobile without authority and with causing damage to the auto.

"The army life is only fit for a lazy man," he told Judge Rowe, "let me go to jail." He did.

ALLEN HANDWRITING ANALYZED BY NOTED EXPERT

GOVERNOR LAUDED AS LEADER

Do you wish to have your handwriting analyzed by a famous graphologist?

The Boston Evening American has employed Miss Louise Rice, one of the most noted graphologists, to give individual study to samples of the chirography of its readers. In today's article, she analyzes the handwriting of Governor Allen. Her second article follows:

By LOUISE RICE
Famous Graphologist

WHEN we find writing which visibly flows, so that we feel it to be a succession of harmonious curves, when the pressure is not heavily light and when every letter can be clearly read as print, we have exactly the writing of the governor of Massachusetts.

The flowing writing of this character is always expressive of suavity, tender-ness, ideality, and a desire-ment of the wish to give the other fellow a chance.

Such a writer will often impress the world at times, as being too "easy," but that is an erroneous impression, as will often be discovered, rather disconcertingly.

The desire to oil the wheels of life to run smoothly often tempts the individual to make the most out of each relationship at man to man, to have a fair amount of pleasure and happiness mixed with necessary hard work, this is the general plan on which the governor be plotted.

He dislike futile experiments, heated discussions, and under-thecurrent animosities. He would rather drag a hard fact into good-natured, ugly air it than to allow it to smoulder.

He will become a quarrel or a struggle, so long as he feels that he must do so without loss, and will never be made stubborn by the mere pressure of those who seek to drive him, which is such a very natural human reaction.

This man, however, is, in a way, a more dangerous opponent than many a man who seems more aggressive. He has the cool, even smiling, fighting spirit of the man who is slow to anger and whose actions are never hasty.

His tendency is to understand people rather better than he seems to do, and to plan far ahead, despite his spontaneous manner.

HARD WORKER

These people, whose natures are really more profound than they seem—those makers of round, even-pressured and very legible writing—are often among the hardest workers in the world, although they seldom seem to hurry.

They have the gift of getting things done without agitation or too much cogeneration.

I rate this writer, therefore, as one of the most useful of public servants, and as a man whose temperament as well as mind are well suited to carry the responsibilities which he has assumed.

He will, like President Coolidge, refuse to be affected by the fevered and hectic aspects of his job; he will probably be as healthy in the governor's chair as he was out of it.

And this brings me to the fact that these smooth, even, unhurried and gracious writers are usually able to escape infections and epidemics, and that serious illnesses pass them by; that they have moderate appetites for the gratification of all the senses and are rewarded by having the senses keep their places, which is below the deadline of a consciousness of them.

NEVER VAIN

Those who expect the chief executive to handle the reins with a flourish of authority and a fanfare of trumpets, as it were, will be disappointed. He is the talent which functions without noise or seeming effort.

He will have the reins very firmly in his hands, indeed, but he will never parade the fact. He will never be vain of his skill, either.

I am sure that I am right in stating that the State will have cause to be proud of him.

Frank G Allen

SELLING WAVE SENDS STOCKS DOWNWARD

Swept downward by a powerful and persistent selling wave, many of the best known industrial stocks sold today in Wall Street at the lowest prices of the year to date. They broke below the levels at which they had been confidently bought by the bulls in the last two or three reactions.

The big bears had their best success with a few of the high-priced stocks which have been dancing among the clouds for a long period. Another fling in Radio to around 353 was Wall Street's challenge to the Radio Corporation to show some tangible evidence of its big earning capacity and its dividend "intentions" for the holders of its common stock.

There is none too much enthusiasm over the Radio-Victor merger among those who have been active traders in both stocks.

Surprising weakness in the motor stocks cropped out on the offering of a few thousand shares in the early afternoon.

Packard dropped back 4 points to 140. Chrysler fell away 3½ to 121 and Studebaker, the new sensation of the motor stock group, surrendered all of its early gains and sold at 81. Nash, Willys-Overland and Briggs Manufacturing shared a like fate.

The high-priced mercantile stocks which had been booming ahead at a good pace, were smothered by the tidal wave of selling which swept all values downward. Montgomery Ward, Sears Roebuck, Victor Talking and Wright suffered.

Bulls were discouraged by the weakness of United States Steel which broke nearly 3 points to 157 and set the signal for a new selling wave in the Independent Steel shares, Bethlehem and Vanadium losing ground, before rallies set in.

Woman Is Chosen as Bank Director

Jersey City, N. J., Jan. 8 (AP)—Walter P. Gardner, president of the Bank of Lafayette, today announced the addition of Mrs. Ida Roffey Bacon, president of the Union Towel Supply Company of New York, to the directorate.

Mr. Gardner said this was "the first banking institution in New Jersey to give to a woman representation on its board. We understand there are only five women bank directors in the United States—one in Rochester and the other four in the West."

Borg-Warner Will Offer New Rights

Stockholders of the Borg-Warner Corporation will receive the right to subscribe to additional stock at a price well under the present market value, in connection with the purchase of the Long Manufacturing Co. of Detroit, one of the oldest and largest producers of automobile clutches and radiators.

Eastern Mass. Dividends Given

Trustees of Eastern Massachusetts Street Railway declared usual semi-annual dividends of $3 a share on first preferred and sinking fund stock, payable February 15 to stock of record January 31 and $3 a share on preferred B stock, payable February 1.

ELLIS A. GIMBEL, JR., assistant to Bernard F. Gimbel, president of Gimbel Brothers Inc., has been appointed head of New York store, one of six in group.

Can't Sneeze on the Flu-Ridden Stock Exchange

New York, Jan. 8 (AP) — After having about 50 page boys smitten with the "flu," the New York Stock Exchange has adopted desperate measures, and the inroads of the epidemic appear to have been checked.

If a page boy so much as sneezes, it causes as much consternation as a 20-point drop in radio. The culprit is sent to the office of the medical director and inoculated. Another sneeze, and he is sent home.

The medical director requires each employe to report to him as soon as he feels the vaguest symptom, and also requires frequent washing of telephone mouthpieces.

FORBES LOOKS FOR MERGERS TO COME

By B. C. FORBES

NEW YORK, Jan. 8—The program of the powerful bulls to start sending their favorite issues higher immediately after the money squeeze had ended, has already made some progress. Stocks today are, on the average, higher than they were when the year closed, despite considerable profit-taking.

B. C. Forbes

With call money so promptly back to 6 per cent, and with the country flooded with ultra-optimistic 1929 business forecasts, conditions for the present would seem to favor the manipulators for the rise.

It may be significant, however, that leading operators don't go beyond the early months of the year in their talk concerning their plans.

As for general business, the new year naturally has not yet brought any important new developments.

Chief interest in the immediate future promises to center in actual and prospective mergers of magnitude. The Radio-Victor alliance is significant of what is aimed at in numbers of other industries, namely, the creation of one enterprise of outstanding influence. It may be that similar methods will be applied to industries now in the doldrums, notably coal and textiles.

Far-reaching railway developments loom. It is inconceivable that the huge consolidation plans now before the Interstate Commerce Commission can be ignored or left hanging in the air much longer. Favorable action along these lines, combined with a favorable Supreme Court decision in the O'Fallon valuation case, might easily bring excitement in railway stocks equalling that already witnessed in the various industrial and merchandising issues.

The latest record of commercial failures reflects the effect of consolidations upon many weak concerns. The number of failures last year, 23,842, is the largest yet recorded, but the liabilities involved were the lightest since 1920, with only two exceptions, 1925 and 1926. The average liability was smaller than for any year since 1921, with the sole exception of 1926.

This reflects not only the greater competition waged by consolidation, but doubtless reflects also the driving into bankruptcy of many small stores by chains. This economic trend is destined to continue. Before very long the competition will not be mainly between chain stores and independents, but between chains themselves.

FLIERS ADRIFT ARE SAVED

Philadelphia, Jan. 8 (AP)—Two fliers, whose amphibian plane was forced down by engine trouble in the Delaware River off the Navy Yard early today, drifted four hours in the darkness before they were rescued by a navy tug.

The pilot, E. E. Smuts, and his mechanic, J. A. Balters, were flying from New York to Florida in a Loening amphibian plane, owned by the Pan-American Airway Company, New York, when trouble with their single motor forced them down.

Jurors Are Sentenced to Go to School 11 Days

Chicago, Jan. 7 (AP)—A jury was sentenced to 11 days' schooling when it freed a prisoner today.

The jury had acquitted a defendant, who, a policeman testified, was found at midnight on the roof of a house with a kit of burglar tools. The charge was attempted burglary.

The circuit court judge, George F. Rush, pronounced a sentence on the jurors:

"If the evidence in this case will not sustain a verdict of guilty, no evidence ever will in any case. You have 11 days more to serve, but I won't let you hear any more cases as jurors. For the remaining 11 days you will sit in the rear of this court and try to learn something of your duties as jurors."

7 DEAD; KILLING SUSPECTED

Cadiz, Spain, Jan. 8 (INS)—Seven dead bodies of seamen from the Italian steamship Vallarsa were found on Puntales beach today under circumstances indicating wholesale murder for robbery.

Fishermen found a rowboat with two nude corpses wedged in the seats. Shortly afterward breakers washed five other bodies ashore.

There were five empty whiskey bottles in the boat but an autopsy showed that the victims had drunk none of the whiskey.

The police identified the men as members of the crew of the Italian steamer, which was anchored nearby. The captain said one of the victims had $1300 with him, but nothing was found in the clothing.

The owner of the rowboat is being hunted.

Doctor Scorned Things Modern, Even Fees

Craig, Colo., Jan. 8 (AP)—Residents of this sparsely-settled mountain country today prepared to open the snowy seven-mile trail to the home of Dr. B. A. Abrogast to conduct funeral rites for the eccentric, old fashioned physician who had dwelt with them for a quarter of a century, ministering to their ills without charge.

Although brilliantly educated and widely traveled, Dr. Abrogast who died Sunday of influenza at the age of 84, selected the lonely backwoods in which to practice, showed a studied disregard for things modern, including telephones, automobiles and payment for services.

PILOT OF RELIEF PLANE DEMANDED NOBILE LEAVE FIRST

EXPLORER YIELDED TO PLEA FOR COMRADES' BENEFIT

cled over us. They had perceived us.

"Viglieri and Biagi, you two go quickly to the landing ground and place the signals for landing. Hurry up! Run!"

[illegible] saw it. In a [illegible] of me to the ground was perhaps 160 yards, but to do it in a short time needed uncommon acrobatic skill. Here and there crevices, some times hidden under the snow, masses of ice to get over, little canals or small ponds to cross by using [illegible] ice rafts, which [illegible] seemed to groan under the weight of the person.

Planes Circling Above Nobile Hope of Safety

Viglieri and Biagi, who had also gone that way many times, would have been very clever if they reached the landing ground in a quarter of an hour.

I saw them moving in the distance. Meanwhile, the aeroplanes began circling round us. I turned then towards Cecioni, who was a little distance from me in a corner of the tent, and I ordered him:

"Put the sledge in order."

With these words we had [illegible] understood that [illegible] one of the radio [illegible] with more [illegible] mitting efforts had put [illegible] possible to [illegible] that we were [illegible] reported. The sledge was not in order. It was necessary to repair some disconnected parts.

"Trojani, look for the wire in the little box. Hurry up."

Trojani was in the tent in a sack of fur with a high temperature. He found the wire and brought it out.

While Cecioni worked to bind the disconnected parts together again, I looked at the two flying aeroplanes. One of them, the seaplane, kept high and circled widely around our post. The other came slowly down, continuing its evolutions over the landing ground.

I followed it anxiously with my eyes, giving news to my companions. Now it would hover over the ground, lowering itself, grazing the earth, disappearing behind masses of ice. In a moment it would rise again.

Nobile Orders Thanks Be Given to Heaven

I followed the maneuvers with [illegible] heart. I did not dare [illegible] He continues to move around the ground. It has landed. Successful landing!

I [illegible] great sob of relief. An [illegible] filled my heart. I turned toward Cecioni [illegible]

"Thank heaven. Let us give thanks, prostrating ourselves on the ground."

Emotion conquered me thinking of the imminent safety of my companions.

I turned my gaze on the aeroplane. Some minutes passed. Then Behounek, who was on the lookout, advised me that Viglieri and a [illegible] were coming towards us.

I waited anxiously for them to arrive and meanwhile I told [illegible] to keep with his preparations. At last they appeared.

Viglieri introduced him to me.

"Here is the General."

The stranger saluted respectfully. I replied, thanking him in the name of all; then, as words seemed to me so insufficient to express our gratitude, I begged Viglieri to raise me up so I could embrace him. Then they laid me down again.

Lundborg, the aviator, began to speak:

"General, I have come to take you all. The landing ground is excellent. I will transport all of you during the night. You must come with me first."

"It is impossible," I replied, and, indicating Cecioni, continued, "Take him first. So I have decided."

Lundborg replied with firmness:

"No; I have orders to take you first because you have to give instruction for the search of your other companions."

At that moment I remembered that only two or three days before the command on board the Citta di Milano had asked me for "data and instructions for the search for [illegible] (of the airship).

I had not succeeded in [illegible] on account of the bad [illegible] ning of the wireless, and [illegible] only I connected the words of Lundborg with this request.

Nevertheless, I was reluctant. The idea of returning to land before my companions was abhorrent to me, even considering it was only anticipating them by a few hours. I insisted with firmness:

"Please take them first. So I have decided."

"No, general!" replied Lundborg. "Do not insist. We will take you to our flying place not far from here. Then I will be back soon to carry the others." And as I began to insist again he cut me short sharply as if to stop any discussion:

"No, I cannot take him now (and he indicated Cecioni). He is too heavy. It is impossible to take him without leaving here the aviator who has come with me, and I cannot do this. Later, I will come back alone, and then I will take him. Also to carry him to the machine would take too long, and we have no time to lose. Let us hasten, please."

I turned to my companions to ask their advice. Viglieri and Biagi approved. Biagi said:

"It is better you go first. We shall be more tranquil."

Cecioni interposed.

"You go. If anything happens you will think of our families."

I was still undecided for a moment. I did not like to go, but on the other hand it seemed useless for me to cause the aviator to lose time by a useless discussion. I dragged myself to the tent to question Trojani.

"Yes, it is better so. You go."

Then I decided that I would start.

General Declares He Needed Courage to Go

But it was not easy. I needed more courage to go than to remain, but under the circumstances I believed that to obey Lundborg was an imperative duty.

In regard to Viglieri and Biagi it was out of the question, as I had already mentioned that they should go last. It was a question of seeing whether I or rather Behounek or Trojani should go.

But I was wanted for the search of the others. There was no doubt that my presence and my advice would be of use. I could not undertake the responsibility of a refusal. I therefore decided to leave.

Biagi had brought me the thick vest of Iceland wool, the same I had worn during the voyage of the Norge. But he said:

"Please leave all the things you can. It is better to be light. It is not cold."

I followed his advice and put down the heavy vest. I would take nothing except the photograph of Mary. The two records of the wireless. Ah, yes. I will take them with me. They might be useful.

(Editor's note—Mary is General Nobile's daughter, and it was her photograph which the explorer carried with him, as mentioned above.)

My companions and myself were really exasperated with the bad functioning of the wireless. The two recording books contained valuable documents, so I therefore decided to take them.

I embraced my three companions who remained in the tent. Then Viglieri and Biagi took me, one by the legs and the other by the arms, and carried me. Useless to relate the small vicissitudes of that little journey. Sometimes I tried to lessen the fatigue of my two companions by leaning my [illegible] on the ground and pressing heavily on it to help to push.

Notwithstanding this the two broke down with fatigue, so much so that every now and then they had to rest. Lundborg, who had gone on ahead, on perceiving this, hurried to the landing ground and sent his companion, Schyberg, to help us. With the latter's aid we at last reached the place.

Lundborg, with Schyberg, meanwhile tried the motor, then called us. I was taken to the [illegible] and put on board. I gave my last orders to Viglieri and Biagi:

"As soon as we start bring Cecioni at once to this place so that he may be ready to start at once. After Cecioni the others will leave in this order: Behounek, Trojani, Viglieri and Biagi. You, Viglieri, take command for these few hours."

The last emotional embrace, the last caress to my dear companions:

"We shall see each other later. I will wait for you. Good-bye."

(Another instalment of General Nobile's dramatic, exclusive narrative will appear in tomorrow's issue.)

PRIMA PUNTATA DELSALVATAGGIO

NARRATA DA NOBILE

Continuando la raccapricciante descrizione del disastro del dirigibile Italia nella spedizione polare dell'anno scorso, il Generale Umberto Nobile, comandante della spedizione, narra oggi l'atterraggio dell'aviatore Svedese Lundborg.

Momento d'indicibile commozione per il Generale Nobile e per i suoi eroici compagni fu quello in cui essi udirono nel silenzio polare il primo rombo di un motore. Nobile ci serive questa emozione.

Egli ed i suoi compagni scrutarono l'orizzonte spingendosi sui ghiacci per farsi distinguere, mentre Troiani accendeva un falo per attrarre l'attenzione degli aviatori e preparo una slitta improvvisata.

I sei volto due aeroplani, uno rimase in alto. L'altro volo sul campo abbassandosi e cercando un buon punto per l'atterraggio, mentre tre dei naufraghi correvano sui ghiacci galleggianti per indicare agli aviatori il posto piu adatto per la discesa.

Il Generale Nobile dice:

Ebbi un gran senso di sollievo, una indescrivibile gioia mi riempi il cuore.

Mi rivolsi a Cecioni e gli urlai: Ringraziamo il cielo, inginocchiamoci.

Appena Lundborg discese e sorridente andò incontro a Nobile, il generale che era stato costretto a porsi sui ghiacci per le sofferenze prego i suoi compagni di sollevarlo perche egli potesse abbracciare il salvatore.

Il Generale Nobile afferma che si rifiuto energicamente di essere salvato per primo, e che cedette soltanto quando Lundborg gli disse che aveva ordini precisi di salvare lui per primo.

L'azzardosa tappa dalla tenda rossa all'apparecchio, il pericolo dei crepacci, l'ansia, sono dal Generale Nobile per la prima volta descritti, cosi come per la prima voltra egli descrive l'arrivederci che egli disse ai compagni, abbracciandoli piangente.

Il Generale Nobile continuera il suo racconto, domani, sulle colonne del Boston American.

Foreword to Second Story

IN the first installment of his dramatic narrative, published yesterday, General Umberto Nobile pictured the plight of himself and his companions marooned on the Arctic ice following the disaster to the dirigible Italia.

After its flight over the North Pole the Italia had headed back toward its base at King's Bay, Spitzbergen. Caught by an Arctic gale the big dirigible had been dashed against an ice hummock and torn asunder.

Nobile and eight companions in the airship's gondola had been hurled onto the ice pack. The other seven members of the expedition were carried away with the gas bag and perished.

Nobile and Engineer Cecioni were seriously injured, but part of the wireless apparatus had been saved. Radio calls for help were sent out while Nobile and his companions made a forlorn camp and, facing starvation and death from exposure, waited and hoped for help to arrive.

Three members of the party, Professor Malgram, Swedish scientist, and Captains Mariano and Zeppi, set out over the ice on May 30 in search of aid.

The remaining members of the Italia party with Nobile on the ice at that time were Signor Viglieri, Professor Behounek, Czechoslovakian scientist; Engineer Trojani, Engineer Cecioni, and Wireless Operator Biagi.

General Nobile described how on the evening of June 22, three weeks after the disaster, two Swedish aviators soared over the camp and dropped messages to the base ship, Citta di Milano, at King's Bay, urging speed in the rescue efforts. The problem as to the order in which the refugees should be rescued when help should again arrive by aeroplane confronted Nobile and was carefully considered by him.

At this juncture the party was thrilled by the hum of returning planes through the Arctic waste. General Nobile now continues his narrative, in which he defends his course and explains why he was the first to leave. The second article is published in an adjoining column.

"I know an easy way to keep from getting fat..... Light a Lucky instead of eating sweets."

Nazimova

Nazimova
Famous Stage Star

THE modern way to diet! Light a Lucky when fattening sweets tempt you. That's what thousands of lovely women are doing—successfully. The delicately toasted flavor of Luckies makes them a delightful alternative for fattening sweets. Toasting does it. Toasting removes the impurities and improves the flavor of the finest tobacco. That's why folks say: "It's good to smoke Luckies."

Men who pride themselves on keeping fit discovered this long ago. They know that Luckies steady their nerves and do not impair their physical condition—many prominent athletes have testified to this fact. They discovered, too, that Luckies don't irritate the throat—a fact subscribed to by 20,679 physicians.

A reasonable proportion of sugar in the diet is recommended, but the authorities are overwhelming that too many fattening sweets are harmful and that too many such are eaten by the American people. So, for moderation's sake we say:—

"REACH FOR A LUCKY INSTEAD OF A SWEET."

Reach for a Lucky instead of a sweet.

"When the New York Commission blocked the match, it was necessary to move the scene of the contest to Philadelphia where there was seating capacity for 90,000 at the Sesqui-Centennial stadium. Philadelphia, though, had always been rated as a cheap fight town. Tunney had fought there several times and only received small purses.

But it was almost impossible to procure an opponent for him until Jimmy Byrne, who is unbeaten in a Hub ring, accepted the match and now this tussle looms up as one of the best of the season.

THESE LEAFS FLUTTER AROUND BOSTON GARDEN TONIGHT

Bill and Ace are a couple of Toronto Maple Leaf stars. They start a lot of the torrid attacks of the Toronto sextet. That team will be tough for the Bruins to beat. They don't bother much with defense. They make whoopee on the offense, though. That's the best hockey to watch.

Dempsey Sad and Broken Over Death

By GEORGE BARRY

New York, Jan. 8 (INS)—His face a wan mask and his eyes puckered and blood-shot from sleeplessness, Jack Dempsey rode the last 90 miles into New York with the body of his late pal, Tex Rickard, this morning and, for two hours, steadfastly evaded a direct answer to the most insistent question of the day:

"Will you fight again?"

"However, I am going to carry on Tex's program as closely as I am able," he said. "We had the dog track at Miami Beach together and I am going back there to do what I can toward making it a success.

"The Stribling-Sharkey fight will see me helping anywhere that help seems to be needed. Yes, I want to see that Tex's plans are fulfilled, if I can."

"Are you going to quit on this man after he is dead?" he was asked point blank.

Passing the Puck

By BILL GRIMES

Toronto Maple Leafs are in the market for a left winger and would look with favor upon a trade which would involve Perk Galbraith of the Bruins. In exchange for Galbraith, Manager Connie Smythe would agree to send Bill Carson to the Bruins.

Manager Smythe has been approached by other clubs regarding a trade for Bill Carson and it is admitted that he would consider a deal for the former Toronto varsity player.

But he wanted either Murray Murdock of the Rangers or Perk Galbraith of the Bruins.

Bill Carson is one of the best scorers in pro hockey. He has been a favorite here since he first played at the old Arena with the Toronto varsity. The Bruins could use, to advantage, a player of the Carson type. They need scorers and Carson would fill the bill to perfection.

The loss of Frank Fredrickson put a bad dent in the Bruins' attack, and did not set well with the fans. Carson is the sensational type of player whose work never failed to [illegible] the crowds.

The Tigers have the Indian sign on the New Haven Eagles. The best that the ex-New York Americans have been able to do with Manager Eddie Powers' team is a tie.

The Eagles can knock down every other team in the Can-Am League but the Tigers refused to carry an inferiority complex into any game regardless of the reputations of their opponents.

[illegible] he becomes accustomed to [illegible] assignment, Clapper may [illegible] at left defense, be[illegible] right hand shot, but he will [illegible] overcome any minor faults.

The fact that the New York Americans have been outdrawing the Rangers this season does not speak well for the Gotham fans' knowledge of the game. Any group which prefers the style of play used by the Americans to that of the Rangers doesn't care how foolishly it spends its money.

Manager Odie Cleghorn stepped up [illegible] to see the Tiger-Eagle game [illegible] week and was very much [illegible] with the playing of Ludger Desmarais of the Tigers. Odie stated that he believed that Desmarais is as fast as Eddie Shore [illegible] as fast a shot as he has seen in years.

That the Pittsburgh Pirates are not playing even average hockey is evidenced by the fact that they have lost seven of their last eight home games.

There is a merry battle scheduled next Saturday night at the Providence Auditorium, for the Rhode Island Reds are due to mix up with the Newark Bulldogs. Newark took the last game from the Reds, 4 to [illegible], in overtime, during which a couple of fights were staged for an extra attraction.

The Providence and New Haven bottle throwers should be severely dealt with before someone is seriously injured.

Six School Quintets In Action Today

By DICK McSWEENEY

A second busy week of interscholastic winter sports is in full swing. Six basketball games are scheduled for today, besides a duo of hockey clashes.

The Medford five journeys to Winthrop, confident of pinning a defeat on the Ocean City quintet. Medford has already started off on the right foot by beating Fitchburg.

Melrose visits Arlington and will have trouble downing the home five. Coach Bevins has a smooth working team at Arlington and his club [illegible] to get somewhere.

[illegible] hill invades Newburyport in some of the other games on the day's program.

A pair of hockey clashes; Bates [illegible] versus Hebron Academy, and Boston English versus Rivers [illegible] are also on the schedule.

[illegible] its grid warriors [illegible] the new gymnasium of [illegible]

A list of prominent speakers, including Bob McPha[illegible] ex-Somerville [illegible] Dartmouth star, have promised to attend the reception and banquet which is to reward the gridiron efforts of the youths who made up the eleven.

The ineligibility of Shanning and Spack is quite a blow to the Trade hockey team. Just when Coach Donovan had whipped his six into shape, the shadow of scholastic requirements fell across the scene.

Both Shanning and Spack are sterling defense men and their absence from the lineup is bound to be felt in future ice encounters. The scholastic ban on these two youths means that they will be out for the rest of the season.

The B. C. High six played two games last Saturday: a morning contest with Dorchester at the Arena, and an afternoon clash with the Melrose high sextet. The Maroon and Gold lost both games. It seems poor policy for any high school hockey team to take on two opponents in one day. One stiff hockey game a day is enough.

The Massachusetts Headmasters' Association will meet at the Boston City Club this Saturday to discuss the question of permitting schoolboy athletes to engage in further competition after they have had four years of athletics.

Limiting the span of schoolboy competition to four years is a commendable action.

In more than one of our prominent suburban high schools, athletes have been known to flunk a year's course so that they might make the team in the following year. There have also been cases in which athletes have stayed back a year in order to be elected to the captaincy of various teams.

HUB AMATEURS SELECTED FOR GARDEN WARS

"Father Bill" Cuddy has selected the best team which will compete in the international events against teams from Montreal, Pittsburgh and New York at the Garden Monday night, and he believes that the boxers he has selected are the outstanding amateurs in New England at their weights.

Tom McNeeley of Cambridge, New England amateur heavyweight champion, has been selected to defend the laurels of New England against Bill Wagner of Montreal, Ludwig Hundertmark of Pittsburgh and the New York representative who will be selected this week.

Ring [illegible], the rugged Dane from Quincy [illegible] bristling blood [illegible] will be the standard bearer in the [illegible] pound division, against Billy Wirs of Pittsburgh, Albert Brideur of Montreal and the New York representative.

Jackie Norton of Roxbury, cleverest amateur featherweight in these parts, has been picked to do battle in the 126 pound class against Joe Orsini, Allegheny Mountain Association champion, Jimmy Thompson, Dominion champion, and the New Yorker who is picked.

The [illegible] representative will be Arthur [illegible], best looking [illegible] to arrive on the scene since Gene [illegible] became a professional.

Director Cuddy expects to receive the names of the New York team within a few days, and meanwhile is selecting the other [illegible] New England boxers who [illegible] to compete in the open tournament.

Four boxers are to be selected in each of the following classes—112, 118, 126, 135, 147, 160 pounds and heavyweight and since only the best boxers are being considered, the show should be by far the best amateur tourney held here in many years.

Rickard Was Stoic In Boxing Game

By DAMON RUNYON

That was the thing that made him the biggest promoter of ... He made his own imagination, that, and his gambling instinct—the nerve to stake hundreds of thousands of dollars on the turn of an event, while other promoters were dealing in hundreds.

The Rise of Lotta Crabtree to Stage Fame

CHAPTER 29

By CONSTANCE ROURKE

"The Keens played one week and we returned to play one week after them. I played to far the biggest houses but not so much money, for their prices were double.

I got up the far-famed play called Fanchon to play in Buffalo. The people were delighted and the theater not big enough to hold them. Now when I write to you and send you bills and notices, don't let any one see them, you can keep all the [illegible]

W[illegible] any one tells you that Smith is going to bring me back, [illegible] tell him that you know better; we have not seen him and if we did we should not speak to him. We have made up our minds when we left San Francisco we should never [illegible] number of [illegible] [illegible] we [illegible] "I'm a star" The refrain sang through Lotta's letters. "I'm a star!" In her next letter to Friend Billie she had forgotten the animosities of the last months in San Francisco, and wanted to return, for friendship and to display her new accomplishments.

"I yesterday received your kind letter, with bill and notices, which gave me much pleasure. But they made me feel quite homesick. . Well, suppose now we start for home in June and make a flying trip through the country for about six weeks and play new pieces, and open in good style at Maguire's. Don't you think I would do well? If so in your next letter let me know, for mother thinks I would do very well for six weeks—two weeks in San Francisco, two weeks in Washoe, and one week in Sacramento, and the last week in San Francisco before leaving for the States again to fulfill my fall engagements. Now be sure to tell me what you think of our plan. . . .

"When in Philadelphia we got a lady who has been very successful in her writings to write me a [illegible] It is called Mabble Astray, or the Child of Trials. We trust it may be a success. If so I shall have the pleasure of playing it in San Francisco."

The Time Had Not Come When She Could Race Back to the Coast

The time had not yet come when Lotta could race back to San Francisco for a driving six weeks at Maguire's or elsewhere, and skirt the country for another season's engagements. She had not reached New York again, and she lacked a striking new play of her own.

No more was heard of Mabble, which may have been dim in plot. But somewhere on a wide circuit, perhaps at Mobile or St. Louis, John Brougham saw Lotta and dubbed her "the dramatic cocktail," a title which Mrs. Crabtree tried in vain to suppress.

The encounter was lucky. Brougham cast scenes from the Old Curiosity Shop into a play for Lotta; she was to double as Little Nell and the Marchioness. This was a triumph indeed, for Brougham was not only an accomplished actor, a successful and prolific playwright; he had been a pioneer since the late forties in an art toward which Lotta leaned, that of burlesque.

A positive turn of fortune had come at last; but Mrs. Crabtree, still the manager, warily stalked success. The new play, Little Nell and the Marchioness, was first produced at a small theater in Boston, the Continental late in 1866; then once more Lotta went on tour, repeating it, only occasionally, through the West and South.

Her new triumps became a matter of record in the New York theatrical papers, during the spring of 1867 she was mentioned almost week by week. When in May she arrived in Jersey City a small tempest of [illegible] arose. What would she do next? She retired with her mother to a farmhouse on Long Island for a rest. Later, with a casual air, as if theatrical productions were the least of their concerns, the Crabtrees established themselves at the Fifth Avenue Hotel.

These patent maneuvers had their effect. Mrs. Crabtree was offered the great playhouse of the day, Wallack's. The time was midsummer, the weather so hot that nearly every newspaper column breathed it. Theatrical business was notoriously poor in New York at this season, but Wallack's was crowded for six weeks as Lotta played there. The Clipper declared that no other star or combination had achieved such a triumph.

With an apparently simple beginning Lotta took off in a familiar play, the romping Pet of the Petticoats, in which she sang Irish songs, danced Irish jigs, played the banjo, and captured the good will of her audience.

Then followed Little Nell and the Marchioness. A critic complained that the dramatist had slighted the part of Little Nell, but the entire play was something of an extravaganza and became more liberal in its innovations the longer Lotta played it.

She did not relish the part of the patient little seraph. Before going on she would knit her brow and smooth it out again, would walk up and down her dressing-room, saying aloud, "Now, I'm poor Little Nell, and very, very serious. . . . I'm poor Little Nell . . . poor Little Nell." This simple device seemed to give her a sufficient assurance; she looked ethereal; the audience was melted to sobs when in the final act the flats were drawn off to discover old Trent kneeling in the graveyard, and when, after this tableau had been fairly apprehended, the back opened and Little Nell, celestial in white fire, was seen ascending to Heaven.

But it was as the Marchioness, in the doubled part, that Lotta came into her own. Ragged and dirty, in colloquy with the Brasses, in the scene where she hungrily eyed the mutton-bone in her fantastic playacting with Dick Swiveller, or in the hardy encounters with Quilp, she sustained a genuine character.

The part was exaggerated, as Dickens himself is often boldly overstressed; but Lotta contrived a comic, wistful, passionate Sophronia who was never actually sure that she was not a Marchioness, etching out the whole effect with secure and simple strokes which she had learned long before in variety.

Perhaps with this accomplishment she should have paused, but she did not. With a slighter grasp of character here humor might have obliterated everything else in the play; it became wild fun tiding past all bounds, from the slapstick of the mustard plaster that Sophronia hurled at Quilp to the by-play of breakdown and banjo in the scenes between the Marchioness and Swiveller.

The minstrelsy matched any that the curious had beheld in any dedicated minstrel hall. Even the first encounter between the Marchioness and Swiveller broke into minstrelsy, with Lotta playing the banjo and Swiveller as end-man with the mutton-bone.

The high point of this play was the fair, produced on a lavish scale, with tents and the Sybil's cave, Jarley's waxworks the peep-show part of the circus, the thimble-rig table a throng of gypsies, a group fighting with broadswords, a concourse of visitors drifting up and down, a parade of clown and pantaloon, and at last the Sable Minstrels with Sophronia dancing at their head in strange bright costume singing song after comic minstrel song with jigs and reels [illegible] and Quilp crying "There she is!" as he was hoisted up on the tightrope by the acrobats.

Lotta's small dancing figure had a vitality which transcended a high-colored massed effect on a large stage. She possessed a personal quality which floated the entire extravagant production. It bordered on burlesque; she brought the play into a realm between reality and comic fancy; yet she kept intact the odd original pathos of her part. "Witchery" some of her critics called it, seeking to name her quality, "a freakish charm." Something that suggested delicacy was usually mentioned even when the critics declared that Lotta was not always entirely refined.

A few fell back upon the observation that she was "a child of nature." It was plain that they were trying to name a highly original, contagious effect. With a wild freedom, a bold inflation which she had learned long ago in the mines, with a wealth and range of humor, the tiny creature had lifted the whole production into the realm of extravaganza, and at the same time impressed her own character upon her audience.

This gala season in New York had more than one hint of reminiscence; the Worrells were ascending theatrical heights at the same moment. They already had their own theater, the New York, and they soon formed a friendly alliance with young Augustin Daly. In a year or two he dramatized Henry Ward Beecher's novel Norwood for their use and at their request, they also acted in his version of "Pickwick Papers."

If Lotta was to enjoy the [illegible] of [illegible] from the [illegible] [illegible] Dickens [illegible] listed [illegible] twenty five [illegible] the [illegible] saw [illegible] Daly's charming meodrama, Under the Gaslight.

To be sure there was no real part for one of the Worrells; she was obliged to walk on! but another of the sisters had the lead, the third a good character role and the play was overflowing with novelty and terror. It was the first success in a type of play which was to overrun the boards for many years.

Snorkey, the wounded guardian of Laura, was bound to a [illegible] track by the villain, and became the parent of a long line of worthy young men and women who were to endure that fate.

In the autumn of 1868 Lotta was at the Boston Theater, advertised by Junius Booth, its manager, as "Little Fairy Lotta," the "Diamond Edition of Dramatic Delights." Here she appeared in a melodrama of her own, "Firefly," arranged from Ouida's "Under Two Flags."

The play was considered daring. Lotta was a vivandiere, a [illegible] madcap, rebel, who wore her skirts six or eight inches from the ground and smoked, freely and gracefully. She afterwards insisted that she learned to smoke from Lola Montez; certainly it must have been from that daring example or from Menken that she received the impulse to smoke on the stage, yet she seems to have kept an air which it was not their fortune to maintain, that of innocence, which carried her past the increasing rigor of the sixties.

In "Firefly" she used [illegible] reckless small [illegible] of business, with her [illegible] of distinction. [illegible] name suggested, she dashed through the rapid action of the play, leading the regiment, mixing with the [illegible] dress, singing [illegible] dancing on parapets with rollicking high steps which rivaled those of the famous Majiltons, and [illegible] across the desert [illegible] her soldier lover, [illegible]

The [illegible] rolled off sofas and showed far more than an ankle; [illegible] up her [illegible] ing she ran on to the stage in "N[illegible]

FAMOUS LOVERS

By COZETTE DOUGLASS

To be forced into a marriage with a man whom you have never seen would be a frightful tragedy to a girl of today. But sometimes it has worked out splendidly, as in the case of Emilie, niece of the Empress Josephine of France.

The Comte de Lavalette was aide de camp to Napoleon, and he and Josephine decided that it would be a good thing for him to marry Josephine's niece, Emilie, who was at the time in school. Accordingly, against the protests of Lavalette, Napoleon escorted him to the school which Emilie was attending where Lavalette proposed and was told that the wedding would take place in eight days.

On the day assigned, the wedding took place, and two weeks leave of absence were granted Lavalette for a honeymoon.

Contrary to expectations, the wedding was a most happy one. After the restoration of the Bourbons to power in France, Lavalette was imprisoned and condemned to death. Emilie tried in every way possible to obtain a pardon for her beloved husband, but failed. Visiting him one day she persuaded him to change clothes with her and imitate her walk. He did so, and then, taking her handkerchief, he held it to his face as though bitterly weeping and passed through the prison gates.

Emilie remained in the cell and after a month became insane. Lavalette made his escape from France, but six years later was pardoned and returned for his wife. She was permanently insane and obtaining her release, Lavalette spent the rest of his life in caring for her.

A short romance, but a sweet one —sweeter still for the devotion which marked its close.

BAER FACTS

by Arthur "Bugs" Baer

A NEW YORK lady of the superior sex bought one of those bargain automobiles last week.

After driving it around the town pump it developed axle canaries, transmission twitterings and a body squeak like an oto accordion.

She trundled it back to the dealer and offered to trade it in for a one-passenger radio set.

The dealer was wearing a high hat like a country stovepipe. He put the double chill on her.

She got a severe attack of revenge and decorated the car with festoons of lemons and calabashes.

Then she parred the car outside the dealer's garage. Which was all right because there is no law against parking.

Provided you can find the space.

On the car was a big sign, "My $5,000 lemon."

For that price it should have been a grapefruit.

The dealer asked the police to compel the beautiful grouch to unpark herself.

She defied the police, the firemen and subsidiary organizations.

The dealer appealed to a judge, and the magistrate asked the dealer where the lady was parking.

The dealer showed him the spot, and the judge stole the parking space.

In the meantime the fair individual continues to drive her car past the dealer's garage with the lemon placared taking the place of her 1929 license plates.

The only way to stop her is to give her the $2,000 back. If we were that dealer we would give her $4,000 and ask her to stay away twice as much.

The best advertisement in the world is a satisfied customer.

The worst publicity in this brace of hemispheres is a satisfied customer who is satisfied that the dealer is a bum.

ON GILA MONSTERS

By GARRETT P. SERVISS

THE psychology of the automobile tourist is involved by Professor Charles T. Vorhies, of the University of Arizona, to explain the mysterious distribution of the ugly lizard called the Gila monster in parts of the Southwestern country where it does not normally live and where naturalists believe it would never go voluntarily or without uninvited aid. The alt. Prof. Vorhies thinks, is afforded by automobile refugees. Curiosity or cupidity is excited by the sight of the monsters seen somewhere along the roadside in the regions where they naturally lead their crawling lives, and they are captured and carried along until their captors find that they are unsalable, or get tired of them, and then they are dropped.

It seems, according to the observations of Professor Vorhies, that this practice has become surprisingly common. He relates that he has been asked to pay $10 for a very ordinary Gila monster and has been solemnly assured by the would-be seller that they were worth $100. He knows a dealer in wild animals who sells "Gilas" to tourists who want to "take them back home," and who carry them hundreds of miles before the charm dissolves.

People dwelling in the suburbs of great cities, and knowing the crate of some automobile tourists for ray saring flower borders and breaking ornamental shrubs, will readily believe the statement that:

"The automobile tourist carries everything interesting from where he finds it to some other place: anything from a "horned toad" to an entire cotton plant, leaves, bolls, boll weevils and all."

It is here that the vicious side of the practice begins to appear. Not only Gila monsters, but many other animals, some of which it is very desirable to keep at a distance from cultivated fields, are transported by these jejune admirers to places where they are not wanted.

The consequence is that both Arizona and California have "cordons of horticultural inspectors stationed at strategic points for intercepting and inspecting autos coming into the State."

Prof. Vorhies relates some singular instances of this strange traffic. "A few years ago," he says in Science, "I was the recipient of a live five and one-half foot boa constrictor, picked up by an autoist just beyond teh border town of Nogales, Sonora. This, I should judge, came up from Central America nearly to the United States by train, thence it certainly came another 75 miles by auto. Roy McClain relates that while hunting a few miles northwest of Paniana, a station about 30 miles east of Tucson, in the foothills of the Rincon mountains, he met a large lizard which he killed with a stick. It measured three feet in length and must have been an Iguana sp. This was in October, 1927. Other observers besides Prof. Vorhies and the official inspectors have known a dealer in wild animals who sells "Gilas" to tourists who want to "take them back home," and who carry them hundreds of miles before the charm dissolves.

When Pain Comes

Two hours after eating

What many people call indigestion very often means excess acid in the stomach. The stomach nerves have been over stimulated, and food sours. The corrective is an alkali, which neutralizes acids instantly. And the best alkali known to medical science is Phillips' Milk of Magnesia. It has remained the standard with physicians in the 50 years since its invention.

One spoonful of this harmless, tasteless alkali in water will neutralize instantly many times as much acid, and the symptoms disappear at once. You will never use crude methods when once you learn the efficiency of this. Go get a small bottle to try.

'BILLIE' WITH POLLY WALKER, IS COHAN AT BREEZY BEST

By NICHOLAS YOUNG

THERE is certainly something distinctive about the arts and devices of George M. Cohan. In "Billie," at the Colonial, last night, you were again taken in hand by the master of light comedy and given something to smile over; ancient matter in new flavor—and what flavor! Fast and noiseless; no hysteria. Just a rollicking, breezy and thoroughly enjoyable evening in what you needed most—good tunes, lively humor and a large and helpful order of sentiment and youth. In these things Mr. Cohan excels; in "Billie" he poured out full measure.

THE distinction that is Cohan's does not lend itself to description, particularly, except that it is clean and honest, and surely does tickle the ear with tempting melody and sugar coated romance. Call it youth on a joy-ride down moonlit lanes. In the case of "Billie," Mr. Cohan has taken an old number, "Broadway Jones," and fashioned it into delicious musical comedy, rich in happy moments, fairly sizzling with dance numbers and—glory be!—good lines for the impecunious. That, in these days, is novelty enough to evoke paeans of praise from even the sternest magistrates of the theater.

NEWEST STAR

The formula was simple. A speedthrift boy inherits his uncle's chewing gum factory, somewhere upstate, and with it his uncle's private secretary. And there you are, with all the odds and amusing plot complications Mr. Cohan could desire.

It was a handful. And now may we introduce Miss Polly Walker, perhaps the newest star in the Broadway firmament, and by any hard rule, one of its brightest. Just a slip of a girl with real talent and glowing personality. Here you discovered youth as you like to find it, not impressionistic, but real youth, but wholesome and sound, and wholly worth any nice boy's attention. Miss Walker is equal to song numbers with decision, and her dances, especially in the ensemble, revealed grace of the distinctive charm.

YOUTH AT ITS BEST

For the boy in the case, Joseph Wagstaff turned in a whiner of a job. Again, it was youth at its best. Mr. Wagstaff had no mean task to embrace; it was "boy" duty from start to finish. But there were no signs of wear and tear, of nagging or indifference. Phew! the endurance of those lads. At a last minute call Helen Reid was thrust into the role played until Saturday by Marjorie Lane.

Heroically, Miss Reid faced her first audience. Her performance was a triumph. In a small part, though important to the play, she acted like a veteran.

Much of the life of "Billie" may be attributed to Robinson Newbold, a comedian of merry quip and excellent authority. Others more or less concerned in the proceedings were Ernie and Val Stanton, June O'Dea and oundles of girls of the dancing and singing variety.

"Billie" may be set down definitely as a great relief from the too flip and generally over-sexed revues and musical shows now in epidemic. It is safe for children and simply great for grown-ups.

Merry Show Pleases Gayety Audiences

"Puss, Puss", at the Gayety, is a merry, kittenish outpouring of music, song and dance, flavored with some exceptional dancing, and staged by an unusually talented cast. The stars, Jack Hunt and Opal Taylor, have previously entertained in this city and their appearance brings hearty applause. Ruth Howarth, Lee Fellows, Letty Lovine, Kay Newman, and Billy Gilbert, Jr., were among the others playing well. From the start of the show until the final curtain a measure of novelty prevails. The dancing throughout the performance was the striking feature. Practically the entire cast of thirty-odd contributed the long list of eccentric steps which are among the features of the performance. It was a fast show and the chorus was brisk.

"Revenge" at Bowdoin

Dolores Del Rio in "Revenge" and Jack Mahall in "The Butter and Egg Man" are the film features for the week at the Bowdoin Square Theater.

OF 'ROYAL FAMILY'

PRINCE OF THE PURPLE

Otto Kruger looks like John Barrymore and if you think Mr. Kruger isn't kidding the handsome American stage and screen idol then you probably can't enjoy "The Royal Family," at the Wilbur.

'THE BIG POND' AT ST. JAMES

"The Big Pond," a delightful comedy by George Middleton and A. E. Thomas, is the attraction for the new week at the Keith-Albee St. James. This play was praised by the New York critics last fall. Lucille Nikolas, a young Bronx actress who created the leading feminine role in the production, has been secured to play her original role, supported by the Keith-Albee St. James players.

The Big Pond" refers to the Atlantic Ocean. Barbara Billings, daughter of a wealthy Ohio rubber manufacturer, is traveling abroad, and in Venice meets and falls in love with a French count. Her father hardly approves of the match, since the count is rich in name only.

Papa Billings then offers the young count a job in his factory, being convinced in advance that the boy will not make good. Much to everybody's surprise, the young Frenchman takes hold and does wonders with his new work. Needless to say, he wins the gold and the girl.

Miss Nikolas is charming in the leading role. She is extremely pretty and talented as well. Her gowns are in excellent taste. John Warner, in the Kenneth MacKenna part, and a first rate Mr. George H. Taylor and Jessamine Newcomb are others who contributed outstanding performances.

Lucile Nikolas

Dorothy Mackaill

KEITH-ALBEE HAS 'THE WHIP'

Based on the old Drury Lane melodrama first produced almost a century ago, "The Whip," new film at the Keith-Albee, is brought up to date in settings and dress, and its thrills are magnified by modern technical skill and photographic ingenuity. It all revolves around a horse-race, as the title indicates, with a great deal depending on the proper horse winning the big derby.

There are plots and counter-plots well handled through the direction of Charles Brabin.

Dorothy Mackaill brings her beauty and charm to the leading role and Ralph Forbes proves an excellent foil in the masculine lead.

Anna Q. Nilsson is striking as the scheming "vamp," and Lowell Sherman contributes another of his villainous "heavy" characterizations. Outstanding in the cast are Mro McDermott, Albert Gran, Arthur Clayton and others.

Headlining the vaudeville program is Joe Cook singing and dancing; Helen Arden, with her "Three Musketeers," in a performance of music, dance and humorous dialogue. The material is by Neville Pleeson. Other acts are Maria De Coma in "Song Impressions," a cycle of character and comedy numbers, the Gilbert Carnival in "Something New in Entertainment," and Chappelle and Carlton with a variety of gymnastic feats.

THERE'S MANY A LAUGH ON KEITH BILL

Two tuxedoed troubadours of the musical comedy and revue stage are the principal revenaders at the Keith Memorial. Phil Baker crushes the last gasp from an ornate accordion and Frank Crumit brushes the whimpering strings of an overgrown ukulele. Baker is assisted in his accordion-pleated dexterities — or rather removed — by the irrepressible Bill Scott. Bill is still doing business at the old stand—up in a box—and is as ever the same superior, bragging, unconstrollable. Due to the amusing interjections and assorted impertinences of the latter fellow in the box, who is still trying to get deeper into Gershwin's "Rhapsody In Blue," but—no luck at all.

REVIVES MEMORIES

Frank Crumit is billed as "Singing Some of His Own Songs." He does, and the audience is elated with them, but the jolly singer finds even better encouragement when he sings ditties of 25 years ago. Do you remember "Bedella" and "Maggie Murphy's Home"?

As if the audience had not had enough of sidesplitting there is also the grotesquely funny O'Donnell and Blair who, in about 10 minutes of continuous disaster, actually "bring down the house." The "house" being a brick affair on stage that is perfectly adapted to tumbling down at a given signal—preferably when Mr. O'Donnell may be buried in the wreckage. Tumultuous entertainment.

MORE LAUGHS

More music-using laughter with Harry Burns—pardon, Signor Burns. The Signor messes around frightfully with the English language, but who will take him to task? Italian dialect comedians are not to be confused with English grammar.

The new photoplay at Keith's is "Man Made Women," featuring Lesleies Joy, H. B. Warner, John Boles and Seena Owen. In spite of its hybrid's parentage, the film is only for the sophisticated. It is all about the momentary desires of a modern young society matron who "carries on" a trifle with a married gentleman and then decides to go home. The direction, velvet smooth, is Paul Stein's.

Frank Crumit

Lon Chaney

LON CHANEY IN NEW FILM AT STATE

"West of Zanzibar" at Loew's State brings another of Lon Chaney's weird and bizarre faces to the screen. The play is set in an atmosphere of stark terror, and its dramatic story of terrible revenge, like a Frankenstein, devours its creator—Chaney.

Tod Browning is the producer of "The Unholy Three" and some of the star's best pictures, directed the new film. The Chaney-Browning combination fairly flourishes in grim mystery; and the director's deft touches embellishing his or that point in the piece are continually apparent.

Chaney plays "Dead Legs Flint," former stage magician, who, paralyzed in a fight with the man who stole the love of his wife, sets out to train him through the wilds of Africa, where his quarry has taken refuge as an ivory trader.

Lionel Barrymore plays "Johnson," the enemy in the story, and Mary Nolan, who will be remembered as the heroine of "Sorrel and Son," appears as the heroine, daughter of the revenge-crazed magician. Warner Baxter plays the renegade physician, and Jane Daly is seen as the erring wife. Other roles are filled adequately by Kalla Pasha and Roscoe Ward.

The stage show at the State is also highly entertaining. It features Emile Boreo, the noted comic pianist and monologist.

Continuing Shows

"Volpone," the fourth and last of the Theater Guild's productions at the Hollis, will take the stage next Monday.

"White Lilacs," an operetta with Chopin for a background, will come to the Majestic next Monday.

"Best Show in Town" is the title of the burlesque entertainment scheduled for the Gayety next week.

"The Trial of Mary Dugan" is announced as the attraction at the Tremont, starting Monday, January 21.

"The Command to Love" will move into the Plymouth on Monday, January 21.

Gilbert Returns

James J. Hayden, managing director of the Keith-Albee St. James announces the return of Walter Gilbert, popular leading man, who made his debut this season with "Seventh Heaven," Austin Strong's play, on Monday evening, Jan. 14. Mr. Taliaferro, well known actor, will be guest artist at the St. James the same week.

"Bossy" at Howard

Bayor (Bossy) Gillis, "The Bad Boy of Newburyport," is the big feature this week at the Howard. "Town is in Blue" burlesque and a bill of pictures and vaudeville complete the show.

CROOK FILM AT ORPHEUM

A reporter, a girl and a dog in a desperate adventure in the underworld are the central figures in "Shadows of the Night," new film at Loew's Orpheum this week. Lawrence Gray, Louise Lorraine and "Flash," the police dog actor, play the principal roles.

Gray, as the newspaper scribe, does fine work in trailing a bandit chieftain, while Miss Gray is seen as a cabaret dancer who aids him in his quest. "Flash" is the hero's ally, and his rescue of his master from an underworld prison, the battle between the dog and the master crook, and other vivid highlights all add in making the picture good.

Harland Dixon, stellar musical comedy dancer, heads the vaudeville bill and gives a remarkable exhibition of his versatility in stepping. Leo Bill presents a novel and amusing contortionist act. Merle Gibson Eva Frisk, Bill and Bob Stewart entertain with songs and dances. Others on the stage this week are Anderson and Graves in a comedy skit, Francine, capable dancers, and Boyd and Wallis, gymnasts.

BEETHOVEN IN RADIO DRAMA

By FRED TOYE
Radio Editor

THE GREATEST, the monumental figure of all times in musical history, is Ludwig Van Beethoven. Men may say that Mozart surpassed him in operatic compositions; Bach in chorals; Schubert and Schumann in art-song. Yet we have the dazzling opera, "Fidelio," the mighty "Missa Solemnis," the moving song, "In Questa Tomba Oscura," none of which is inferior to the best that Mozart and Bach and Schubert and Schumann ever set on paper. And over and above all these the ten immortal symphonies and the countless sonatas, trios, etudes and other forms of instrumental composition.

COLORFUL LIFE

IN THE MAN, Beethoven, there's a world of romance. His hectic life, his extraordinary habits and mannerisms, his many thwarted loves, his final tragic isolation in utter deafness, make the most moving of stories. The Eveready Hour sponsors have done well to make this man the subject of their broadcast tonight. They would search the pages of fiction in vain for material as colorful, as varied and as rich in achievement.

MUSIC DRAMA

BEETHOVEN'S life will be portrayed in a sort of musico-dramatic style, or as a melodrama with interpolated music from the protagonist's own composition. These selections will include excerpts from the lovely Fifth and the mighty Ninth Symphonies, and the Fourth piano concerto. A chorus of sixteen voices will sing Beethoven's hymn, "Ehre Gottes," "The Worship of God in Nature." Frederick Forrester will enact the role of Beethoven, supported by a cast of actors including Rosaline Greene, Richard Abbott, Edwin Thompson, Jack MacBryde, Mercella Shields and Reginald Barlow. The piano solos will be done by Kathleen Stewart, and the symphonic pieces will be played by an orchestra directed by Nathaniel Shilkret. It will be heard through WEEI and the Red Network at 9 o'clock.

REVIVALS

THOSE almost forgotten old ballads, "I Can't Give You Anything but Love," "If You Want the Rainbow," "How About Me?" and "You're the Cream in My Cawfee," will be revived on several chain and local programs during the course of the evening.

MAINE VILLAGE

SOCONYLAND is probably one of the few program features which present New England and New England life to the radio audience in a pleasing manner. These broadcasts have been uniformly of excellent character and of high entertainment value. There will be some disappointment that tonight's scheduled broadcast which was to have featured the colorful doings of our mighty John L. Sullivan, has for some mysterious reason been transsubstantiated into a tale of the State of Maine seacoast. "Old Man Ledge," a short story by May Stanley, presenting a drama of unusual doings in a small Casco Bay village, will occupy the attention of WEAF's microphone and WEEI's transmitter at 7:30 tonight.

COAST-TO-COAST

COLUMBIA presents two programs, each of an hour's duration, tonight. The first is the weekly Show Boat thriller, which concerns a lovely Southern girl, her lover and an unlovely villain. There will be plenty of emotion and excitement, and promise of a fitting end for the persecutor. The second hour is a nation-wide broadcast of "The Voice of Columbia." For this hour the participants in the broadcast have assembled the most amazing omelette of musical numbers that has been offered to radio listeners in many a day. "Symphonic jazz," oratorio, operatic numbers, symphonic pieces, lieder and Gilbert and Sullivan excerpts rub elbows with "The Bells of St. Mary's" and Hosmer's "Southern Rhapsody."

FERDINAND'S IN NEW BRANCH

The Frank Ferdinand Corporation has taken over its newest branch, open today, on the first and second floors of the Stevens Block in Needham.

The officers of the company are Victor Heath, president; Edward Burnett, buyer, a veteran of 40 years' service with the Ferdinand organization; and Harold E. Clapp, resident manager. Mr. Clapp, a Needham man, is a veteran of the World War and was assistant treasurer of the Ferdinand store in Roxbury.

Commenting on the Needham expansion, Mr. Heath said today: "Frank Ferdinand, the founder of the institution which bears his name, was one of the pioneers of the furniture industry. After following the sea for a number of years, he settled in Roxbury, and, in 1869, started a store which for 60 years has been known to all Bostonians as the 'Blue Store.' His policy, followed all these years, was to give the best possible service, placing the customer always in the right. With our enormous present growth and our increasing number of out-of-town customers, we have selected this new location as the most suitable to serve better our customers in Needham and the surrounding communities."

ACCEPT PLANS FOR STADIUM

Solution of Harvard's problem of accommodating the football crowds at the stadium was expected today with announcement by William J. Bingham, director of athletics, of the plans accepted by the committee for the regulation of sports.

Since the Harvard Corporation rejected, last spring, plans for enlarging the stadium to accommodate 80,000, architects have been working on plans for concrete and steel stands to fill in the open end of the present structure. The Boston building commissioners have condemned the old wooden stands, and at the end of the last football season, they were torn down for good.

Three proposals have been presented the athletic committee, for permanent concrete stands, and movable or permanent steel stands. It is understood that the corporation suggested permanent concrete stands in harmony with the present architecture, and it is believed the athletic authorities favor some sort of steel stands. The class of 1879, donor of the stadium, is known to favor either the steel stands projects, but has not expressed any opinions on the concrete stands.

Six Held in Theft of Car in Dorchester

Charged with the larceny of an automobile belonging to Harry Starr of Madison ave., Dorchester, six Boston boys are being detained in Stamford, awaiting the arrival of policemen from Station No. 9, Roxbury, with warrants. The youths were arrested while bound for New York. Their names have not yet been forwarded.

Tuberculosis From Cows

It Attacks Children Through the Milk Supply

More than thirty years ago, when Nathan Straus began his crusade for pasteurized milk, adding deeds to words by spending a fortune on milk given freely to the poor, he warned fathers and mothers: "Raw milk is a menace. Cattle are infected with tuberculosis and give it to your children in the milk."

Boiling milk will destroy the tubercular germs, but it destroys a certain quality in the milk. By thorough pasteurizing the food quality of the milk is not diminished at all, and pasteurizing makes it safe for children.

Many foolish doctors, heaven knows why, endeavored to interfere with Mr. Straus' campaign that has saved thousands of children. Cities all over the country now enforce milk pasteurization by law. Sometimes it is not done thoroughly, but at least the principle is recognized, and the milk is better.

Before Mr. Straus began his campaign something like 90 out of 100 children taken into one of New York's "charitable" institutions died in their babyhood, POISONED. That horrible death rate has been abolished.

Now the Journal of the American Medical Association, contradicting officially the foolish statement that cattle do not communicate tuberculosis to human beings, announces that 34 OUT OF 60 HUMAN TUBERCULOSIS CASES HAD BOVINE (CATTLE) ORIGIN.

Dr. J. T. Morrison writes in the London Lancet an article that the American Medical Association Journal summarizes thus:

> "This bacillus," says the writer, "accounted for 75 per cent of the cases of tuberculous glands in the neck. A study of the age factor shows that 65 per cent of the persons with human infections were over twelve at the age of apparent onset, while 35 per cent were twenty or over when symptoms first appeared. Among those with bovine infection, on the other hand, only 15 per cent were over twelve when attention was drawn to the disease. Of these 15 per cent, although the infection was bovine, three out of the five were not only over twelve but actually between twenty and twenty-five when evidence of tuberculosis was first obtained."

Cases of tuberculosis from cattle are contracted by children because childhood is the age of milk-drinking and bovine tuberculosis comes through the milk.

When Dr. Blake, one of the greatest American surgeons, returned from his war work abroad he said: "French doctors call it insanity to feed raw milk to children. They are right."

Nathan Straus told the fathers and the mothers the same thing thirty years ago. He spent a fortune establishing pasteurization plants in different American cities and in cities abroad and establishing milk-distributing stations in New York City where poor mothers could get milk not only pasteurized but "modified," mixed, as it should be for children of various ages, in accordance with scientific prescriptions.

For this the world owes him thanks and many a poor mother has remembered him in her prayers.

To this should be added that Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Straus were united in their philanthropic work, sharing the burden equally.

Of all so-called "civilized" countries the one most in need of milk protection for children is Great Britain. There they talk nonsense about "building up a race of cattle to resist tuberculosis," while the children are getting tuberculosis from raw milk, handled in bulk, NOW.

One British doctor who ought to have a very large leather medal and "dunce cap" presented to him, talking about "clean handling of food," suggests that "we might become just too cleanly." That sounds like 1428, not 1928.

He thought that "exposure to infectious disease might make youngsters acquire immunity of extreme value to them."

Exposure to infectious diseases in milk (scarlet fever, tuberculosis, etc.), compels parents to acquire tombstones for children's graves, and they are NOT of value to them.

In the slums and among savage peoples, where children have plenty of opportunity to "build up immunity," they build up instead a gigantic death rate before the third year and throughout childhood.

Common sense is important and willingness to recognize facts.

Paternal Ambition—

It Forgot Other Men's Children

Mr. Grescius, of Chicago, says he went into the bootlegging business to educate his children. One of his daughters is in a fashionable girls' school in Boston; his son is a university student. Mr. Grescius was sentenced to jail for thirty days.

It seems to be customary for lonely widows arrested for bootlegging to explain that their children need food. Fashionable education had not been mentioned previously. The difficulty about raising children on bootleg proceeds is the necessity of poisoning other men's children with the bootleg product.

For Health's Sake

The Red Cross makes ten suggestions for the prevention of influenza. They are worth remembering: Go to bed when ill; eat varied food, rich in vitamins; sleep long, with windows open; work in cool atmosphere; wear moderately warm clothing; wash hands before eating; exercise outdoors often; stay away from houses where there is influenza; avoid crowds; avoid unnecessary traveling.

Nine of the suggestions are sound for the safeguarding of health generally at all times. The last is a precaution against visiting places where infection may lurk during the present outbreak of influenza. The suggestions are worth space in your bedroom, on the wall, beside the mirror.

The Squirt Revolution

by Herbert Kaufman

Rods or rebukes are no longer in the vogue. If you want to be smart, spoil the child.

Little Aubrey must not be corrected; any attempt to mould the darling's character will tend to muddle his individuality.

And if Betty Ann is inclined to play with matches, smash mirrors or jam-smear the living room wall—don't interfere—she's simply expressing her personality.

So let the cute dears gouge grandmother, blurt Aunt Mary's age—howl, kick and spill ink to heart's content.

Don't cramp their style or you may maim their souls—in other words, raise orderly, respectful and proper sons and daughters.

The latest school of boshology insists that parents have no right to "impose complexes" or assert "bull-dozing authority."

"Father" and "mother" are now outlaw words; we are all on terms of equality in Nursery Hall and therefore "Bill" and "Bess" to the junior generation.

Meanwhile, the combined experience of all centuries and races declares that babies aren't born truthful, obedient or moral, and won't become so unless the fundamental ethics are persistently taught.

They inherit directly from Adam; their normal instincts are the same in a Kaffir kraal as in a Park avenue nursery.

Until guided otherwise, it's human impulse to take the shortest cut to possession and desire.

Lying, thieving, violence are natural traits.

An infant doesn't understand traffic or danger signals—can't realize why we have decided upon certain prohibitions and repressions—which necessity has incorporated into judicial codes.

Therefore, left to indulge his own sweet will, he must fall into some repulsive habits, commit various nuisances—and inevitably become one.

Man is amenable to reason and explanation only because successive generations of experiment have taught us how to develop character.

He can be schooled in restraint and brought to appreciate the logic behind standardized "don't" and "mustn'ts."

But no youngster left to unbridled autonomy and selfishness can be expected to mature into an acceptable member of society.

Nobody gives a tinker's dam how hard the modernists ride their hobbies through painting and sculpture, but when they begin to distort the art of motherhood with abnormal notions, it's time to call a halt on the squirt revolution.

New York Day by Day

by O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, Jan. 8—It used to be that just to mention Hoboken was good for a vaudeville laugh. Like so many other towns with wild Jersey names it was a peg upon which jokesters hung wheezes. Nobody, it would seem, journeyed there save to catch a boat.

But Hoboken suddenly became a place of importance and sophistication, and is called "the last succoust of Bohemia." The intelligencia began writing pieces about it in the ultra journals. Now Yorkers and there in droves to be entertained. In a word, Hoboken has achieved that frenzied description, "smart."

For years it was noted as a German center where the thrifty housfrau kept her pots and pans shining and sea-going husbands, aided by good beer and the tilt of the sun, paraded the sidewalks with rolling gaits. Hoboken's mother was supposed to be stodgy.

The opening of the Holland Tunnel, through which New Yorkers may motor in white-tiled elegance, played its part in the new sparkle. Other things, such as the old-time Hofgrau and German cooking also contributed to the remarkable renaissance.

The new Hoboken is proof that cultured appetites often run to pig's knuckles, red cabbage, tripe and other such low foods. Hoboken has many places where such delicacies may be washed down by frothy mugs of beer whose alcoholic content is never a matter for debate.

There is, too, a playhouse which is presenting plays weekly by competent performers. It has none of the "arty" eagerness to save the drama such as is featured by so many obscure theatrical movements. It is merely offering intelligent plays intelligently.

Broadway producers swamped with the cussing and cocktail dramas are already beginning seriously to discuss the "Hoboken movement." And the nightly migrations have been felt by the Times Square eating belt. Among those I saw over there were Charles Hanson Towne, Christopher Morley, Frieda Hempel, Conde Nast, Arthur Hopkins and Berton Braley.

ONE of the most interesting phases of New York life is the shifting of its amusement centers. Last year the appeal to sophisticates was in Marion's Black Bolt. Few seem to go there any more. And now it is Hoboken.

THERE comes to New York streets a strange dead calm between 8:30 and 7:30 o'clock in the evening. All but so-called fashionables are dining. On a busy block in West 42nd st. last night I counted only 19 persons. That's one of the silliest, come to think of it, walking around town—counting people, with all there is to do.

ANOTHER Joe Miller—Joe. B. Miller—is shortly to publish a "Joe Miller Joke Book." He has a genealogical connection with the original Joe Miller, who was an actor born in 1684 in England and died in 1738.

SIMILE: "As useless as the extra handle on a bouillon cup."

AN eight-cylinder executive, who has been hitting on all eight for some time, found his nerves acting up. He became irritable, sleepless and lacking pep. One evening he came home in particularly low spirits. His wife, a little worn with him, too, suggested he sit down and have an old-fashioned cry. He immediately burst into a torrent of tears and they had to call two doctors to stop him. But he has been his old self since.

THE Cornelius Vanderbilt home on Fifth Avenue is usually dark and curtained. The other evening it was all lit up like a Christmas tree.

"What's going on?" some asked a corner cop.

"Nothing," he replied. "I suppose the folks just came home for an evening."

THEATRICAL production costs are reaching a new high—as we say "in the street." A handknitted gold vest worn by a portrayer of King Louis for only three minutes cost $7245. And if it didn't sound so much like one of those absurd free puffs we would chronicle the producer's name. But we did not see the bill.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

DO you remember the dreams you had when you were seventeen? You grin sheepishly at them now, but nevertheless there's a tender spot in your heart for that bewildered youngster who was you. How much he had to learn—and how life hurt him in the learning!

Here's another youngster today whom life is hurting. Be gentle with him—as you once needed gentleness.

Dear Miss Robinson:

I wonder if you'll take me seriously or just laugh at me, as so many older people do. I am a boy of seventeen with ideals. I have ideals about everything in life, especially girls. And, Miss Robinson, my ideals are slowly but surely being crushed. I've wrapped girls in a mantle of fairy loveliness and they are tearing it to shreds.

Everywhere it's the same story—all one hears from girls is sex—sex—sex. Why can't they see beauty in everything—in God and His ways? Why must they see only the disgusting? Aren't there any girls who are intellectually inclined—who can become comrades in the mutual love of beauty?

All life seems to me a mockery just now. Is everything disillusionment? Is all reality hideous? Perhaps there are only the dreams of a silly boy, but please help me.

A BOY OF SEVENTEEN.

They're not the silly dreams of a boy, son. They are the doubts and dreads that come to any sensitive soul when first it faces life. But don't worry—reality isn't as bad as it looks. The reality about girls, for example, is infinitely more beautiful than you have dreamed.

You've made a fairy vision of womanhood and now, to your horror, you find that they are not at all fairy-like—that they are, in fact, as unfairy-like as men. And that seems to you a terrible thing. It isn't. It's a beautiful and blessed thing that we're all of a piece—men and women—part of the same common clay. For because of that we can understand each other as we could never understand each other if we were made in different mold. And that understanding is an infinitely finer thing than all your filmy fancies, son. One real woman—warm-blooded and selfish, foolish and greedy, peevish and proud as real women are—is worth a thousand of your visionary virgins. Some day you'll love a woman like that and be glad that her cussedness matches yours.

Stop hating reality, lad.

Stop trying to adapt people to your delicate standards.

Adapt yourself, rather, to life, with all its seeming grossness. For behind that grossness lie miracles and wonders. And in it all that is noble and true and beautiful takes root.

The Saviour of the world was born in a manger, bedded on cattle fodder. But from that manger shone a glory that the years have never dimmed. Do not turn away from mangers.

Beauty is born in them.
